STEAM TO MELBOURNE.

The magnificent new steel steamship
GABO, 3000 tons,
Commander W. Donaldson, will leave the NEW WHARF, FOOT of KING-STREET, on FRIDAY, October 30, at 2 p.m.

The attention of the public is invited to this splendid vessel (sister ship to the Buninyong), which is one of the largest steamers owned in Australia. Full advantage has been taken of latest improvements in passenger steamship to make to GABO one of the most comfortable and luxurious vessels on the Australian coast.

Her SALOON occupies the full width of the ship; the large STATEROOMS contain only TWO BERTHS each; the ELECTRIC LIGHT is fitted throughout, and her roomy deck affords a commodious promenade for passengers.

For freight and passage, apply to
WM. HOWARD SMITH and SONS, Limited,
79, York-street.

REDUCED FARES TO MELBOURNE.

The PASSENGER FARES to MELBOURNE, by the fast and favourite S.S. BARRABOOL, NEXT SATURDAY, will be REDUCED as follows:—

SALOON ... ... TWO POUNDS
STEERAGE ... ... FIFTEEN SHILLINGS.

For freight and passage apply to
WM. HOWARD SMITH and SONS, Limited,
79, York-street.

STEAM TO BRISBANE, MARYBOROUGH, ROCKHAMPTON, MACKAY, AND TOWNSVILLE.

The fast and favourite
S.S. LEURA
will be despatched from the NEW WHARF, foot of King-street, for the above ports, transhipping at Brisbane, SATURDAY, October 31, at 1 p.m.
No goods received for shipment after 12 o'clock noon.

The undersigned have now arranged the movements of their steamers so that passengers for Queensland can call successively at all Northern Ports as far as Townsville. Steamers leaving Brisbane on Wednesdays call at MARYBOROUGH, ROCKHAMPTON, MACKAY, and TOWNSVILLE.

Passengers by these steamers may rely upon
A SMOOTH PASSAGE
north of Brisbane, as they will go inside of Fraser's Island, thus AVOIDING BREAKSEA SPIT, and the discomfort which going round the Spit involves. PASSENGERS for ROCKHAMPTON also are taken up to the town, thus AVOIDING the ANNOYANCE and DELAY of TRANSHIPPING into a STEAM LAUNCH in Keppel Bay.

At TOWNSVILLE the steamers are berthed at the TOWNSVILLE JETTY, from which passengers can WALK INTO TOWN. STOCK and CARGO can also be landed with the least possible risk of damage.

FOR PASSENGERS the excellent accommodation provided in the LEURA is well and favourably known.

For freight and passage apply to
WM. HOWARD SMITH and SONS, Limited,
79, York-street.

MANAGERIAL NOTE.—In the old country during the past few years two great dramatic events have been witnessed—the phenomenal runs of HAMLET, at the LYCEUM and PRINCESS'S THEATRES, London. In Australia, the greatest run attained by the same play was accomplished by Mr. DAMPIER, at the Victoria Theatre, when its performance excited the greatest enthusiasm and interest in nightly gatherings of most distinguished and representative audiences. The S. M. Herald said:—"The Victoria Theatre was crowded to the ceiling. . . . Mr. Dampier's appearance was the signal for continued cheers. . . . It is creditable to the public taste that such large numbers should nightly assemble to enjoy what is really an intellectual treat."

Ask the unbiassed opinion of any who have witnessed it, whether "The Naked Truth" is not as original and the equal, if not the superior, in pathos, poetry, and passion, of any drama that has of late years come to us from the English or French stage. It tells a tale of society, without an impure suggestion or ribald jest. It contains a PLAY WITHIN A PLAY, wherein occurs one of the most startling situations EVER WITNESSED ON ANY STAGE.

SYDNEY ADDRESS:—
George E. Young's Office,
73, Royal Arcade,
where all communications connected with the Election should be addressed.

TO THE ELECTORS OF CENTRAL CUMBERLAND.
Gentlemen,—In announcing myself as a Candidate for your suffrages at the Election, which is to take place on THURSDAY, 29th instant, let me state that I desire to be accepted only on the grounds of eligibility. In the existing state of political life, where there is neither a Ministerial nor an Opposition party in the true sense of the word, I am obliged to steer an independent course, and maintain that position which in the future might be most weighty in securing the good of our electorate and the good of our great colony.
The greatest potency in individual success in life is self-reliance. I believe that that same quality, with intelligence and industry, will secure equally good results in the political arena.
It is quite unnecessary for me to detail my opinions in this address upon the present state of our political horizon. You are already acquainted with them, either by contact in public meeting, or by contact in public print.
During my campaign, hitherto, I have maintained the one unbending, uniform, outspoken, fearless course, having nothing to gain by vituperation, malice, slander, tactics, or electioneering cries.
I ask for your votes and influence, gentlemen, on the broadest basis of true statesmanship—as one who seeks to benefit his native electorate, and as one who desires not only to consolidate the present commercial and industrial prosperity of our great colony, but who desires to assist in laying the further foundations for the prosperity of future generations.
There is no candidate in the field to whose claims upon you I surrender one iota, and there is no candidate in the field who owes greater debts of gratitude to the electors than myself. Born and reared amongst you, passed through the various degrees of industrial life, toiled and built up an enterprise among you, [illegible] in your midst, deeply interested myself in your concerns [illegible] many more [illegible] display of mutual confidence manifested [illegible] a full show of trust on the day of poll. There are three members to be elected. All I ask is that I shall be one of them, and I believe, if you do so, [illegible] I shall never betray the trust reposed, nor belie the hopes you entertain on my behalf.
I am essentially a working and active man, and wherever my lot in life is cast, I shall, by force of character, continue the same activity; and I trust, as in private so in public life, results will follow sooner or later which will cast a halo of beauty and attractiveness over the electorate of Central Cumberland, and produce some effects in the colony of New South Wales.
My political creed has many times been before you, and from first to last I have maintained and intend to maintain, the same high standard and the same uniform course of procedure which I mapped out at the outset of my campaign.
The fruitgrowing, the manufacturing, the timber, and the Civil Service interests of the electorate shall have my most hearty sympathy and most cordial and active assistance.
I am, Gentlemen,
faithfully yours,
C. E. FULLER.

CENTRAL CUMBERLAND ELECTION.
Good Templars, Local Optionists, and all friends of the people, are urged to vote straight for Messrs. Parkes, Scrivener, and Fuller, those gentlemen having pledged themselves to support an extension of the Local Option principle to the renewal of publicans' licenses.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.

The latest returns from the Bogan place Mr. Cass first, and give Sir Patrick Jennings a majority of 70 over Mr. Kelly. Six other returns have to come in, but these will probably improve Sir Patrick's position on the poll.

The result of the polling for the Upper Hunter, as telegraphed from Muswellbrook, places Fitzgerald first, Hungerford second, and M'Elhone third.

Polling takes place to-day at Balranald, Patrick's Plains, and the Richmond.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

POLLING.

BOURKE (2 MEMBERS).

BOURKE, TUESDAY.

The returns are in from 27 polling-places, and 16 returns are yet to come. The present state of the poll is as follows:—W. Sawers, 760; R. Barton, 609; R. R. Machattie, 493; A. J. O'Grady, 418.

EAST MACQUARIE (2 MEMBERS).

BATHURST, TUESDAY.

The official declaration of the poll for East Macquarie was made to-day by Mr. C. J. West, the returning officer, at Kelso, the remaining returns having been received since last night from Palmers, Oakey, and Hillsbury. The total number of votes are:—S. Smith, 1113; J. Shepherd, 587; A. Hughes, 528; Tonkin, 355; informal, 21. This is the largest number of votes ever polled in East Macquarie. Messrs Smith and Shepherd were declared duly elected, and they, with Messrs. Hughes and Tonkin, addressed the electors.

UPPER HUNTER (2 MEMBERS).

MUSWELLBROOK, TUESDAY.

The final returns from the Upper Hunter election are:—R. G. D. Fitzgerald, 903; R. Hungerford, 776; J. M'Elhone, 756.

THE BOGAN (2 MEMBERS.)

The latest intelligence from the Bogan electorate accounts for 49 returns, which place Mr. Cass first, Sir Patrick Jennings second, and Mr. Kelly third. Sir P. Jennings has a majority of 70 over Mr. Kelly, and his return is assured. There are six more returns to come in, but these are likely to increase Sir Patrick's majority.

NOMINATIONS.

WOLLOMBI (2 MEMBERS).

MR. LYALL SCOTT AT WOLLOMBI.

WEST MAITLAND, TUESDAY.

At the nomination of candidates for the Wollombi electorate on Saturday,

Mr. Lyall Scott said that the people of the district should have something to say in the matter of the election of the man who looked after the expenditure of money on their highways and bridges. (Cheers.) He had been through the whole electorate on several occasions on business and pleasure trips, and knew every hole and corner of it. He was satisfied that he was well acquainted with it. Their roads, bridges, and culverts were not in such a state as he would like to see them, and as they should be. He thought all the work connected with them should be done by contract, as that was the fairest and most impartial way. Every man would have an equal chance, and all would be fair and above board. (Cheers.) Their district was a great, magnificent, and rich one, but one measure, which could do much to improve their lot, if properly compiled, was most unjust. He alluded to the timber regulations, which had apparently been drawn up by men who knew nothing about it. (Cheers.) He would like to see that measure improved, and if returned would devote his attention to it. He was a plain-spoken man, and always said what he meant, and he was not going to trim or hide anything, and, during the present electioneering trip, he did not pledge himself to any man for any purpose. The only one he intended to make, whether he gained or lost votes by the declaration, was that he intended to visit their electorate if returned at least once a year. (Hear, hear.) That was his only pledge, and he was quite certain that the people whom he now numbered amongst his strongest supporters would be the first to bring him to book if he disregarded that promise. He thought that they had no Ministry now, as the lately formed one could be looked upon as poitically defunct. He did not make the statement he was going to make with the desire of gaining votes, but long before the late dissolution he had made up his mind not to go for the Ministry then in office. He would not pledge himself to either side, in fact he hoped to see another party arise—he hoped to see a young and energetic party holding the reins—a real thorough Australian Parliament. (Cheers.) He would now deal with one of the most pregnant and important questions which could disturb the inhabitants of any country in the world. He referred to the Land Act. One of the candidates for their suffrages had stated during his tour that Sir John Robertson's Land Act was a complete failure, but he (the speaker) emphatically denied the statement. (Cheers.) He believed that it was one of the greatest boons that had ever been conferred on the people of New South Wales, and in support of his statement he drew attention to the number of people it had caused to settle on the land, and the result could be seen in the number of happy, comfortable homes. (Cheers.) The Act had a great many abuses. These abuses had been pointed out when the bill came before the world, and a great many improvements could have been effected; but Sir John Robertson was headstrong, thought his work perfect, and would not listen to advice. That statesman reminded him of a darling mother who could not see and would not see anything wrong of her offspring. (Laughter.) If Sir John Robertson got into power again, and was induced to bring out an amended bill, that would do a great deal of good, and the combination, in his opinion, would be much better than the present measure. (Hear, hear.) One clause of the present law was bad, and that was the fencing clause. (Cheers.) That clause bore hardly on a poor man, as he was compelled to fence in two years, and this was an undue pressure on a man with little capital. If he spent the money he had on fencing, he must of necessity let other portions of his holding go unimproved. He would be unable to reap the profit of his labour, and would be kept impoverished. In the Western division the squatter has the privilege of feeding on the selector's land until he is compelled in self-defence to enclose it. That was not right. (Cheers.) The speaker also maintained that the forfeiture clause of the Act was severe, and if returned he would be in favour of doing away with the great power of the Minister. (Cheers.) Whatever could be said of Mr. Farnell, they must give him credit for his candid avowal on that point. One of the candidates had said that he was afraid they had too much education. However, as an intelligent man, he could not say so. They ought to try and bring education and all its facilities to the door of every man, woman, and child in the community. (Cheers.) He thought that when education was compulsory it should be free. The next question he would touch was free trade and protection. He was a rigid free-trader, and did not intend to alter his views on the subject. He did not think it was proper to impose a tax on working men's clothes and tools, and he included the farmers in the list of working-men. New South Wales had free trade; but it was a sort of mongrel free trade, which required improving and clearing of its defects. He held that a man in the colonies ought to be allowed to devote his energies and talents in any way he wished. He should be able to sell his produce in the best market; but in order to do this the farmers would want good roads, and the road question came in again. The squatters in the North-Western district were able to get their wool to market cheaply by railway, and farmers' produce surely should be got to market with as little expense to them. (Cheers.) They should be placed on an equal footing with the rest of the community, whether it paid or not. All their post offices and other Government buildings did not pay. He was decidedly against local option—(hear, hear)—and his experience led him to believe that some of those temperance men who were always ready with harangues were the most intemperate men. (Laughter and cheers.) Some of them were always forcing their views upon the people, and they tried very hard to force this cry of local option down their throats. He had many disputes on the subject, and he knew that he did not always please; but he did not lose his temper, and if he thus met a friend who could not convince him, or would not be convinced, he did not get warm on the subject, but was content to let the matter drop. (Applause.) If there were a clause to allow publichouses to open at certain hours on Sunday it would do away with a lot of sneaking backdoor work and drunkenness which he had seen, especially in Sydney. When men got into an hotel on Sunday they had a drink, and then another and another. There they stopped and spent their money as they appeared to get imbued with the idea that they should part freely and often to make some recompense to the publican in order to recognise in some way the danger he underwent in allowing them into his house, and thus defying the law. (Cheers.) He maintained that, as men would drink, it was better to let them do it openly, instead of in this underhand fashion. (Cheers.) He had spoken to nearly all the superintendents of police on the subject, and so could his hearers; and it would, no doubt, be a revelation to many people that they held the same opinion as he did. For many years he had sat in the Water Police Court in Sydney, and he there had a chance of seeing the working of the Act, and of gaining the ideas of the sub-inspectors of police. He would ask them to weigh the situation carefully, and if their decision was that he was the best man, he would be exceedingly happy to be their representative. He asked his supporters not to be too confident, not to depend upon one another to put him in, but for every one of them to rally round him, and if they did so he was confident he would be in the proud position at the head of the poll. (Cheers.) In answer to a question, Mr. Scott said that the trams were mismanaged, and were a burden on the Government, but they were a great convenience and could not be stopped. He had not made up his mind about payment of members, but he thought that men should not require emolument for their services.

Mr. JACQUES then addressed the electors. He said that he was a native of the colony and a local man, and he had come forward to represent partly the working men and partly the free selectors. With regard to the Land Act, he had taken up land under Sir John Robertson's Act when 11 years old. He could not do it now, although immigrants who came to the colony one day could take up land the next. The fencing clause was a bad one, as the big capitalists had all the best of the poor man. He believed in local land boards, but not in the division of the runs. He favoured local option and local self government. Education, if compulsory, should be free. Local boards should be appointed to look after the expenditure of money on the roads and bridges. He was not in favour of immigration, as they did not populate that district.

Mr. GEORGE ANDERSON said that under Sir John Robertson's Land Act the people could take up the land at 10s. per acre and spend 20s. an acre upon it, whilst under the present Act every 40 acres cost £3, whilst the fencing which had to be done in two years cost £62. He was a land agent, and knew what he was talking about. The land cost the rich man £1 16s 8d per acre for 640 acres, whilst the poor man's 40 acres cost £3 per acre. The fencing of 40 acres cost £62, whilst 640 acres in one line stood at £248. The largest selector had a great deal the best of the bargain. The working of the land boards needed regulation. One person could sit on the board, one had sat, and indeed one had forfeited land. These officers were not above suspicion, and could be got at. He was against the fencing clause in its entirety, and he would be in favour of allowing a man to fence the portion of his land which was most useful to him, which he thought should be done. (Applause.) He was against local option, as he had plenty of experience of its bad effects. He had travelled in places where he could not get a bit to eat or drink. Never mind what the law was, there would be drinking, and personally he would have his glass of beer whenever he wanted it. The law required considerable alteration, and he hoped to have something to do with it. He was in favour of agricultural and horticultural schools being established in different centres, and if they were instituted they would do much to alter the undeveloped character of many of the country districts of the colony. It would be well to be able to tell what soil, &c., was suitable for different plants and cereals. He was in favour of the present system of education, but all children should be educated free, and not go to school to be called paupers. When the youngsters go up on Fridays to pay their school fees, they would deride those who did not pay and call them paupers, thus making the poor little ones miserable, giving them a distaste for learning and causing ill-will between the parents. (Cheers.) He would put an end to that by going for free education. Grants of free passes on railways should go to all school children of whatever creed. (Hear, hear.) He was strongly in favour of taxation on unimproved lands, as he considered the man who held up to 20,000 acres had as much right to contribute as the poor man. He was an advocate of local self-government, and they should have their fair share of revenue from the large landholders to put on their roads and bridges. He was a roads and bridges man, and he thought it was a great thing to keep them in order. In reply to questions he said that he was an employer of Chinese labour. (Groans.) He would explain why. He worked hard on his side of the district to show the people there what could be done with the land. He wished to try the effects of irrigation, and had to get the Chinese to do the work. (Interruption.) He did not employ them for profit, as he paid them the same wages as Europeans. He was in favour of a poll tax on them, but as only one Chinaman to every 100 tons could now come by vessels to the colony, it was not likely that many would flood the country. At the time the row about Chinese took place in Sydney, he dismissed the row he had working for him, and employed nine Europeans in their place. He gave them instructions about their work, but they did not do it.

Mr. W. H. VIVIAN said that he had been honoured by a requisition from the residents of the Bogan, but he had declined it on the ground that he had no wish to oppose his friend Sir Patrick Jennings, or Mr. Cass, and he would have been supposed to have stood in the squattered interest, which he emphatically asked his hearers to disabuse their minds of. (Hear, hear.) He had decided to stand or fall by the Wollombi, although he was almost frightened to trust his precious neck on their horrible corduroy roads, and if his address was lacking in crispness, he would ask to be excused, for the little wit and oratorical power he may have possessed was quite shaken out of him. (Laughter.) He would do his best for their roads and bridges if returned, not only for their sakes, but for his own, as he would often wish to be with them, and would like to do it as easily as possible. (Applause. As additional means of communication, he was in favour of a light line of railway to the nearest point of the main line, and if returned he would try to obtain that boon. (Cheers.) He thought that, as the Minister for Works was already so greatly hampered, and had hardly sufficient time to perform his multifarious duties, he could not devote much attention to the railways. He would do his best to get a Minister for Railways appointed. He could travel and see the country, and construct light lines where he thought they would be remunerative. (Applause.) In referring to the election disabilities, the speaker mentioned that he had many friends in the district, who were unable to vote for him simply because their names were omitted from the roll. In his opinion, men who had the franchise should be allowed to vote in any part of the colony, or, in other words, "once a voter, always a voter." He would like to see the same custom apply here as in some of the cantons of Switzerland, where a man's name was taken and he received a voter's ticket. The law should recognise the equality of men. (Hear, hear.) A man who could buy 20 different pieces of land in different parts could now have 20 votes. Was that right? he would ask them. (Voices: No.) He was of the same opinion, and would do his best to alter the law if returned. (Hear, hear.) He then referred to the Land Act. The Act of 1861 was very good in its way, but it did not inaugurate the period of peace and plenty which it was supposed would be the outcome of it. The cry against its working had been so loud that it caused a meeting of squatters and selectors with the view of reformation of the measure. The result of that meeting was that a Royal commission consisting of Messrs. Morris and Rankin was appointed to report on the state of the country. Then came Mr. Farnell's Act in 1884. He did not believe the new Act was perfect, but it was comprehensive. (Hear, hear.) The fencing clause was a bad one. In the eastern division the clause was not required, for the selectors there did not take up land upon which to run sheep, cattle, or other stock, except his own little mob of children. (Hear, hear.) In the western portion of the colony, where stock are bred and run, the fencing clause was necessary to save litigation. It was well that time could be given for the erection of fences, as it was a very nice and subtle question as to what period could be granted for the putting up of fences, but he thought it could be extended almost indefinitely. He would say with no uncertain voice that the fencing clause should be expunged from the Act in the Central division. (Hear, hear.) There always would be a bad feeling between the selectors and pastoral lessees through the trespass of stock, and here was another fruitful topic of argument as to what was wilful trespass. He considered the Local Government Bill would be a great benefit to the countryif its provisions were considered calmly and sensibly. (Cheers.) The candidate explained the provisions of the proposed Act, and criticised the method of election of representatives. Taking their own electorate as an example, he pointed out that Gosford was a much larger and more thickly-populated place than the Wollombi. The former place could elect all the members of the local board, whilst the people of the Wollombi would be left in the cold, as they would be paying their share of the taxes and probably not getting their share of the expenditure. He would have all the district divided into five portions, and a representative could be sent by each. (Applause.) He was totally and entirely antagonistic to the principles of local option. He deprecated the idea of eleven-twentieths of the votes of a municipality imposing their will on the other nine-twentieths. He would ask them, Was that right? (Voices: No, it is not.) No, it was not, as it gave one man power over another, which was deleterious to the body politic. (Hear, hear.) Was it not almost as reasonable for the nine-twentieths to say, You must drink, as for the other side to ram their opinions down their opponents' throats? He was also strongly opposed to non-compensation, as it was unjust to a large portion of respectable citizens—the publicans. (Cheers.) He was opposed to the opening of hotels on Sundays. One glaring injustice of the Act was the equality of the license fee. In Sydney an hotel did twenty times the business a rural one did, yet the proprietor only paid the same license, and that was not fair. (Cheers.) He would do his best to alter these discrepancies, if returned. There should be better facilities for inspection in the case of the adulteration of spirits. (Applause.) He would go to the fountain head and see that licensed wine and spirit merchants and brewers did not put in poisonous and injurious substances. (Cheers.) They were all agreed on the education question. He did not see, however, why all the children of a family between the ages of six and fourteen years should be compelled to go to school on the one day, as youngsters were at that period of life of some assistance to their parents, and he did not think it right to take all their help from them at once. The little girls could assist their mothers in household work, whilst the boys could chop wood and carry water. (Hear, hear.) Free education met his approval. He was strongly against payment of members. (Loud cheers.) Constituencies could find a sufficient number of men who thought the honour of representing them sufficient emolument. (Cheers.) He was entirely opposed to protection, and warmly advocated the principles of freetrade. (Cheers.) In answer to questions, he said that he was in favour of lectures in the schools of arts and public libraries on Sunday, so long as there was no compulsion to go. He was opposed to State aid to male immigration. He favoured an absentee tax, but was opposed to a land tax, as antagonistic to his idea of freetrade.

Messrs. Scott and Vivian had the show of hands.

COUNTRY ELECTIONS.

THE MURRUMBIDGEE.

WAGGA WAGGA, TUESDAY.

A statement has been published in a Melbourne paper to the effect that many of Mr. Gormly's supporters identify themselves with the candidature of Mr. Dibbs, and that Messrs. Douglas and Bolton would go together; and also that Messrs. Gormly and Dibbs would run together, thus forming two pairs. This is positively denied here by the supporters of Messrs. Dibbs, Bolton, and Gormly, and Mr. Dibbs' joint secretaries (Messrs. C. H. Croaker and George Coleman) authorise an emphatic denial that Mr. Dibbs is bunching—he simply asks one vote. The rumour has evidently been started to strengthen the position of Mr. Douglas, who is weak. Messrs. Dibbs, Bolton, and Gormly are going independently. On finding that Mr. Wright was not coming forward large numbers of voters who were pledged to him have transferred their support to the Premier, for whom Mr. Wright and the late member for the Murrumbidgee (Mr. Loughnan) are actively canvassing. There is not the slightest probability of the candidates bunching as suggested. The object of the statement was apparently to injure the Premier, and to bolster-up Mr. Douglas. It is not true, as stated, that the preponderance of the voting power is in favour of Messrs. Bolton, Douglas, and Gormly, in the order named. The candidates are actively engaged in addressing the electors at the various centres of population.

MORUYA, TUESDAY.

Mr. H. Walker, one of the candidates for the Eden electorate, addressed a crowded audience here last night, in the Mechanics' Institute, and received a favourable hearing. He principally referred to the advantage of local representation, Land Bill amendments so as to make fencing optional, local boards to be elective, appeals to the law courts instead of to the Minister; free education, with admission to the High schools open to the pupils of any school, whether public, private, or denominational; local option wherever it is proposed that local government shall apply; fiscal policy in the direction of protection, so as to encourage local factories; and railway extension wherever working expenses were assured. A vote of confidence was carried, with few dissentients; but no amendment was proposed. The meeting was most orderly and attentive.

BALRANALD, TUESDAY.

Last night Mr. J. Cramsie, a candidate for the Balranald electorate, addressed the electors in the Masonic Hall here. There was a large attendance, and the show of hands was in his favour.

PARKES, TUESDAY.

Mr. W. T. Coonan, M.L.A., addressed a large meeting of electors here last night. He thanked his supporters, and stated that he would act in the interests of the whole of the electorate. He was well received.

URANA, TUESDAY.

Mr. Frank Cowley, one of the candidates for the Murrumbidgee electorate, addressed a meeting of electors here last night. He was very well received.

BANQUET TO THE PREMIER.

A banquet was tendered last night in the Masonic Hall, St. Leonards, to the Premier the Hon. G. R. Dibbs. The Hon. W. B. Dalley, M.L.C., presided, with the guest of the evening in the usual post of honour. Further on the right were the Hon. W. J. Trickett, Minister for Public Instruction; Messrs. T. M. Slattery, M.L.A.; R. Prendergast, Captain Jenkins, Rev. A. Yarnold, F. Adams, and W. H. Tulloh. To the left of the chairman were the Hon. Alexander Stuart, K.C.M.G., M.L.C.; the Hon. J. P. Abbott, Minister for Lands; the Hon. J. See, Postmaster-General; the Hon. H. S. Badgery, Acting-Secretary for Public Works; Mr. I. E. Ives, M.L.A., Messrs. S. H. Hyam, H. George, J. Thompson (accountant, treasury), and G. N. Pitt. Among the other guests were Dr. Kyngdon, Messrs. R. Moodie, S. Punch, D. Fisher, W. Cope, R. C. Brindley, T. Littlejohn, H. C. Mitchell, T. B. Gaden, F. Smith, J. F. Mann, J. G. Mills, T. K. Abbott, S.M., R. M. Pitt, E. Heaton, O. Blacket, A. Hilder, G. Withers, P. Hayes, Captain J. Monroe, W. G. Barker, T. A. Dibbs, C. A. Aitcheson, J. Booth, G. Ranken, W. C. Goddard, Captain R. T. Moodie, W. J. M'Leod, J. C. Dibbs, H. J. Bartlett, A. Armstrong, G. Pile, C. E. Jeannerett, C. A. Benbow, C. Hayes, F. S. M'Dermott, F. Lee. Messrs. D. Wilson and J. Woods occupied the vice-chairs. The company numbered about 180. A number of ladies were seated at the rear of the principal table. The hall was decorated in every part with a profusion of flags, and a band played numerous selections of music during the evening.

The Chairman commenced the proceedings by reading a list of apologies for absence, which included the names of the Hon. the Attorney-General, the Mayor of Sydney, Mr. Kethel, M.L.A., Mr. Purves, M.L.A., and about half-a-dozen others.

The CHAIRMAN proposed the toast of "The Queen" in the following terms:—Gentlemen,—I propose to give this toast, which is always offered with pride and received with enthusiasm at all festivities, the health of that gracious lady who rules over the mightiest empire which the world has ever seen; and to the utmost limits of which the influence of her life, its virtues, trials, and sufferings is carried with a power to conquer men's hearts greater than that of her fleets and armies—the Queen.

The toast, as usual, was drunk with every manifestation of loyalty.

The CHAIRMAN then proposed "The Prince of Wales," and in doing said: "Gentlemen,—I read some time since an article on that much misunderstood person, the working man, which was intended to establish the proposition that the hardest-worked man in England was the Prince of Wales. I must confess that a very much stronger case was made out for his Royal Highness in this regard than the most ingenious, eloquent, and unscrupulous orators could possibly make out for some of those gentlemen with hands artificially stained for effect, who pose upon the hustings at election times as the working man's candidates. These gentlemen are mainly characterised by having scarcely ever done one honest day's work in their lives; but this laborious prince clearly wakes up to the performance of engagements, which, in his case, have long ceased to be much attractive, or anything else, but serious matters of business. Whether sick or well, in good or bad spirits, he has to get through his work, and, most difficult of all, assume the air of deriving an immense amount of satisfaction from its performance. It is rumoured that there is more than a possibility that he may before long give to these colonies the pleasure of entertaining him. I am sure, if he comes, he will be the object of a loyalty as deep and unobtrusive as his courage, his good nature, and his culture deserve, and as his exalted station entitles him to expect. I propose to you the health of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

The toast was very warmly received.

[Sir Patrick Jennings, Colonial Secretary, here entered the hall, and was received with prolonged applause.]

The CHAIRMAN then proposed "His Excellency the Governor." He said: On the eve of his departure from this colony, over the government of which he has presided for so long a period, we can speak of her Majesty's representative with greater freedom than would be permissible under other circumstances. In a few days he will have left us; and considering his age, his long services, and his distinguished career as a great Imperial servant, it is probable that this will be the last of his State employments. He can thus be spoken of as one whose public actions—whose whole life—are fairly the subject of review and criticism. While his administration of the government of this country has been undisturbed, as far as I am aware, by a single circumstance which has tended in the smallest degree to impair our confidence in his justice, it has been signalised by one event which has made it, and will for ever make it, historical. It has been his peculiar privilege, and perhaps greatest distinction of his life to be the medium of conveying to his Sovereign the most striking assurance of the loyalty of her people in the most distant of her possessions. I give you his health, and would ask you to increase his pleasure by hearing how this toast was received, by joining with it the name of the gracious lady who has blessed his domestic and adorned our social life during her residence here. I propose to you the health of Lord Augustus and Lady Augusta Loftus.

The toast was drank with applause.

Mr. JOHN WOODS, on rising to propose the toast of "The Ministry," was received with applause. He said:—Mr. Chairman, this toast is a peculiar one, under the circumstances in which the Government is now placed. We have been told by a very high authority that the Ministry were burglars. Yet to-night they were surrounded by honest citizens, and if the charge against them were true—if they were guilty of the charge—the company I see present would not be here. (Applause.) I am not prepared to argue the constitutional question, but I am prepared to say that there has never been a Minister in the position occupied by the Hon. George Dibbs who had obtained more confidence from the intelligent people of this colony than he had. I am quite prepared to say that he can look back with pleasure on every action performed by his former colleagues, and that every action of that Government was calculated to raise this colony in the eyes of the world and benefit it at the same time. I am pleased to learn by telegram that Sir Patrick Jennings has been returned—(applause)—because, as regards education, position, and honesty, Sir Patrick is equal to any Minister. I propose the health of the Ministry, and may they remain long in power.

The toast was drunk very heartily.

Sir PATRICK JENNINGS, on rising to respond, received an ovation of applause. He said:—Mr. Chairman, vice-chairmen, and gentlemen,—You are aware that under ordinary circumstances the reply to this toast would devolve on the Premier, but we have him to-night as our guest, and as his time to speak will soon come, I will simply say a few words in conjunction with my colleagues in reply to the toast you have so cordially drunk. I must admit that this is the first time I have had the honour to reply to such an important toast. I ought to feel inspired in the presence of the genius who presides over this festive board to-night. I ought to have a kindly thought for Auld Lang Syne when I see my old friend Sir Alexander Stuart; and I only hope, in alluding to the Old Testament, that the mantles of these prophets will fall upon us, and that we will have a double measure of their spirit. You all know under what peculiar circumstances the Premier has been called upon to form a Government. They have led to aggressive attacks which I for one am called upon here to rebut. I am sure you will agree with me that these attacks have been made in a spirit unworthy of any Australian statesman. I have lived many years in Australia, and with regard to the Legislature, it has been said that I am in some degree a burglar. I never knew it before, and I am not very sure of it now. (Laughter.) I have mixed in politics for the last quarter of a century in this colony, and have seen many struggles of political parties and strife, which engenders heat that may be always tolerated; but when public life becomes an occasion to indulge in a carnival of slander, I think it is time for us to take notice of it. I for one am here to-night to say in the most absolute and open way that I take this my first public opportunity to denounce such conduct, and ask you to express your opinion with me in condemning such a course of attack. (Applause.) It is not my intention to go into any question of the policy of the present Administration. That, of course, devolves on the Premier, and will come in due time. I have been for the last two days instructed in my duties as a member of Parliament, and I am only just told that I am being finished off, or, to use a vulgar term, "topped up." (Laughter.) I am bound to say, in expressing my opinion of the present Administration, that whatever may be their fortune, I, for one, am glad to associate with the gentlemen whom I see at this board. The whole of the opposition has been directed to the personnel of the Administration, and not to their measures; but no candid man could say a word against their personnel as far as appearances go. (Laughter.) With regard to their qualification for the high offices which they have been called upon to fill, I am sure I speak the truth when I say that no men will give more honest and conscientious services to the country than the colleagues with whom I have the honour to be associated. (Applause.) If there is anything which causes me pride it is to find myself surrounded with such colleagues and under the leadership of George Richard Dibbs. (Applause.) I have said these few words, and I am not going to trench upon the time which should be given to the toast of the evening; therefore I thank you heartily for associating my name with the toast of the Ministry, and I can assure you that, whatever our fortunes may be, we will keep office with honour and leave it unstained, and will always endeavour to do faithful service for our country. (Loud applause.)

The Hon. J. K. ASHWORTH was called upon by the company to respond. He said: Mr. Chairman and gentlemen,—I can only reiterate what has fallen from my worthy colleague, Sir Patrick Jennings. During the last few months one of the tactics of the Opposition was to attempt to discredit the Government by saying they disagreed among themselves. I take this opportunity of saying that there has not been the slightest disagreement amongst any of us. It has been said with regard to your late member, Mr. Dibbs, that he and I did not agree, but as a matter of fact in no instance have we ever had the slightest disagreement on any matter. I know of no man with whom I could more earnestly co-operate with. He may have the reputation of being firm and stubborn, but I do not think these are bad characteristics. People say the same of me, and I think that in the interests of the colony some firmness and stubbornness is required. I have been twitted with my reference to land agents in my speech at Gunnedah. I now say that my statements then were not intended as a reflection on the officers of the Department. What I desired to say was that the administration of the department would be conducted on commercial principles, and that it would not be necessary for people to employ agents to do work which ought to be done by the Government. I recognise the necessity for land agents, and there are amongst them men of ability and integrity who would be a credit to any community. But what I hope to do is so to administer the affairs in the Lands Department, that we will be able to get rid of those gentlemen. The squatters and selectors would be better without them, and if I remain in office 12 or 18 months, I hope to be able to carry on the department without them. I hope that some day you will return any colleague Mr. Dibbs by a large majority; but he will have to seek the suffrages of this or any other community by promises which he knows he can never realise. Such promises have been made here, and, unfortunately, the working classes believe in them. They are promissory notes which may or may not be honoured; but, like other promissory notes, I think they will be dishonoured. (Applause.)

The Hon. W. J. TRICKETT rose next, in response to a similar call. He said: Mr. Chairman,—Notwithstanding the fact that I was associated with my worthy colleague as a member of the Ministry, I went through the ordeal very satisfactorily, and have been elected. Though we are in a great measure, not exactly to be sympathised with, yet we cannot but express the sense of the deep loss we suffered in the case of such estimable leaders as Sir Alexander Stuart and the Hon. W. B. Dalley. Mr. Dibbs having been now called upon in this trying position to form a Ministry, I am sure this colony will give what is due to anyone—fair play—and let us do what we can in the interests of the country. I believe the country will be no part to us being hounded down by a son of abuse such as has been poured upon us, and I hope that the House when it meets—notwithstanding the arrays of names published in the papers, ministerialists, opposition, and independent members, and which I believe are inspired—will have sufficient fairness to deal with measures and not men, and not follow up this torrent of forward to-night. I will pass over all personal matter—he election and all that—just to say a few brief words more upon other subjects. The power of speech has to a certain extent passed from me by reason of the temporary failure of my voice, due to the exercise of it at Murrumbidgee; but my powers in that respect have nevertheless not become exhausted. I have yet sufficient shot in the locker to deal with that election, and I have no doubt I shall be successful. There are times in the life of every man when his feelings are such that language fails to adequately express them. It has been said that "out of the fulness of the heart the mouth speaketh," but the fulness of my heart at the present moment almost takes from me the power of utterance. I will briefly say a few words more with regard to the position in which I stand before you to-night. I think I need not say one word in defence of my action in regard to the reconstruction of the Ministry. You have before you not only the personal appearance, the personnel, but you have had the utterances of those gentlemen associated with me in the Government I have formed, and I am perfectly satisfied I need not say one word regarding my colleagues and their appearance and their utterances. I feel that their associating themselves with me will be an honour to me and an honour to the country. Of course it will be a matter later on for the country to express its congratulations as to the composition of the Ministry. Of course, we do not know what the Parliament will be when the whole of the electorates have made their choice. But if I look at the late Parliament I will tell you in all honesty, you will not find the same body of men which was representing the colony at the time the House was prorogued. The difficulty was then was in selecting, we had so large an amount of material out of which a Ministry could be formed. When Parliament was prorogued we had at least 90 members who were able to form a respectable Government. Without being invidious, I have done my best in selecting four or five to reconstruct the Ministry. I am perfectly satisfied that when we reach the floor of Parliament—for that is where we intend to go for our defeat, and that is the only place where we can be dealt with—my colleagues will be able to hold their own intellectually, I might also say physically. (Cheers.) We are determined to meet the House on the 17th of next month, and we are quite prepared to be met by any vote of want of confidence which may be brought forward. We are prepared to be met by that motion, but, as one of my colleagues happily said to-night, there is not the shadow of a doubt that when we have accounted for the programme, we intend to submit a vigorous programme to promote the progress of the country—when we have defended ourselves from having acted unconstitutionally, it will be seen that the Government, as now constituted, has a sufficient working majority—a majority of 2 to 1. (Cheers.) Even if there is not a majority of 2 to 1, by going over the elections so far as they have gone I am able to diagnose the case, and my diagnosis justifies me in saying that we will have more than a fair working majority. We will be able to give an account for the prorogation and dissolution, and to show that they have been productive of no harm to the country. Now, I would like to say a few words as to the presence here of a gentleman who, although he is suffering from illness of a severe nature, has, by his attendance, paid me a peculiar compliment. I mean the presence of my late colleague, Sir Alexander Stuart. (Cheers.) No harder working man ever filled the position he occupied—(cheers)—no more conscientious man ever filled that position; no kinder leader ever had a more willing following—(cheers)—and no more gentle spirit ever governed a body of men who at all times were ready to give time and labour to assist him in the work he succeeded in accomplishing. (Cheers.) It was said of the late Government that it would not continue to hold office for six weeks. But it continued for three years—(cheers)—and, as evidencing the spirit in which our late leader was held, one and all of his colleagues felt when he retired that they had not only lost a faithful and able leader, but also a warm personal friend. (Cheers.) His presence here to-night to encourage his bantling, who has to take the lead of the present Government—(cheers)—is a proof that he will give to me, and to those associated with me, his advice and his assistance, and it is a favour all the greater when we consider the state of his health. (Cheers.) With regard to Mr. Dalley, who could for one moment doubt that his advice and assistance are with us, for it is impossible for him to change. (Cheers.) We know what he did for the late Government, and the incessant labour and toil to which he subjected himself to make the Stuart Government a success—(cheers)—and I believe what he has done and what the Stuart Government succeeded in doing as a Government will be remembered when those who have done their utmost to destroy our fame and reputation are forgotten in the dust. (Cheers.) The present Government intend to carry on upon the lines of their predecessors, and we take with us the good wishes of the two of the crew who have left us, and who, I am perfectly satisfied will always be ready to give us, the new hands in the ship, all the advice and assistance their experience will enable them to give, not only for our benefit, but in a patriotic spirit for the benefit of the country. (Cheers.) We are, as I have said, determined to meet Parliament with a full programme of measures, and the fair play which will govern the representatives of the people within the walls of Parliament, where fixed lines of debate are laid down, and where personal abuse will not be allowed, will no doubt be extended to us. (Cheers.) We shall be met by those who, in the interests of the people, will give us that warm assistance which the representatives of the people always accord to a Government desirous of working and who are able to present a fair programme of measures. (Cheers.) We hope to get that fair measure of support, because we are offering to Parliament such a field of legislation as will be productive of the highest good to the country at large. (Cheers.) One word with regard to myself personally. I esteem this the greatest honour that could be accorded to any public man; that, when the people in any electorate should tire of his services—("No")—when the majority of the electors decide that he is not a fit and proper person to represent them, there yet remains that almost untold number represented by the intelligence of St. Leonards and Sydney—(cheers)—who are determined to make an otherwise painful defeat in reality a glorious victory. (Loud cheers.) I shall always entertain towards those who worked for me in the late election—towards my chairman, committee, and secretaries—the warmest affection. To the people of St. Leonards I may say that the defeat is but temporary. (Cheers.) A change will come over those who, excited by passion and by language which I will not further refer to, have rejected one who in his conscience believes he faithfully served the electorate for three years—(cheers)—and the time may come—[A voice: It is coming now!]—when those who voted against me may consider that a wrong was done, and may wish that it be wiped out and forgotten. (Cheers.) But whether I represent St. Leonards or remain on the banks of the Murrumbidgee, driven as it were out of the gates of Paradise, if I may so term my late electorate, what you have done for me to-night will be a beacon and a guide; I never can forget your kindness, and while representing the Murrumbidgee I will sit and represent St. Leonards as well. (Cheers.) I am not your member in a parliamentary sense; but you have bound yourselves to me by silken ties that will never be unbound, and I shall to the latest day of my life remember the kindness shown to me to-night and the honour conferred upon me and upon my children. (Cheers.) For those belonging to me and for myself I can say that this entertainment to-night will be one of the proudest memories of our lives. (Cheers.) I beg to return you my warmest thanks, and to say that to-night will never be forgotten. (Prolonged cheering.)

Mr. C. M. PITT proposed "The Parliament."

SIR ALEXANDER STUART, who was greeted with much cheering, responded on behalf of the Legislative Council. He said he found himself placed in a very peculiar position. He was called upon to respond to the toast of the Legislative Council, a House to which he was a member, but in which he had not yet had the pleasure of finding whether his seat was comfortable or uncomfortable. (Laughter.) He had, however, watched the calm, serene atmosphere which pervaded the Legislative Council, and he hoped that if he were permitted for a short time to occupy a seat there, that this calmness and serenity would have the effect of doing some good to himself. (Hear, hear.) It was from no choice of his that he had changed his position, and he would much rather have remained where he had been if he had been blessed with the health and strength which were necessary for carrying on the laborious work of the Assembly. Yet the work done by the Legislative Council was not work done in vain. It was useful work, and in the calmness of that Chamber there was a possibility that he might achieve some degree of usefulness for our common country. (Cheers.) When he entered public life, 12 years ago, it was with the desire to do some good for the colony, and he looked back upon the time he spent in the Legislative Assembly as not being altogether thrown away. (Cheers.) He believed that the measures in which he had taken part, and especially those in which of late he had taken a prominent part, were calculated to do great good to this country—(cheers); and whatever his future might be—whether he were able for some time longer to carry on some degree of work, or whether he had to succumb altogether, it would be a source of great gratification to him that he had been able to perform something which had been useful and of lasting benefit to this country. (Cheers.) With regard to the Legislative Council, he was perfectly sure that body was not only entitled to, but enjoyed, the respect of the whole community—(cheers)—and if he were permitted to take his part with them, he trusted that whatever that part might be, it would not in the slightest degree decrease the respect and esteem in which the Council was now held. (Cheers.)

Mr. IVES, who also was very cordially received, responded for the Legislative Assembly. He said he stood there with feelings both of pleasure and regret—pleasure at having been returned by this electorate, and regret that their guest, whom he had known for many years, and who had worked with him—(cheers)—in connection with important financial and other public institutions in the city, had not been returned with him. (Cheers.) If the electorate had to go again through the recent ordeal of election it would, he was quite sure, return Mr. Dibbs at the head of the poll. (Loud cheers.) He felt convinced that if had not been the intention of the electorate to put Mr Dibbs out. (Cheers.) He (Mr. Ives) had said he would take an independent course whether he won or lost his election, and he had taken that course, but if the same election took place to-morrow they would find his esteemed friend returned at the head of the poll, and he believed he would be second. (Cheers.) As one of the representatives of the electorate he had felt it his duty to be present at this banquet to bear his humble testimony to the worthiness of their friend and guest. (Cheers.) No matter what course he might take in Parliament when the House met, he had felt that as a private citizen he had a right to be here to bear his testimony to a gentleman whom he had known for so many years, and always as an honest upright man. (Cheers.)

Mr. HYAM, who also responded, said he was present to do honour to his esteemed friend, Mr. Dibbs. (Cheers.) They had heard Mr. Dibbs say that his Ministry would bring forward measures that would be conducive to the welfare of the colony, and as he (Mr. Hyam) was pledged to his constituents to support measures, and not men, he would when the time arrived do all in his power to help the present Ministry. (Loud cheers.) He (he, in common with all present, that the Ministry were deserving of a fair trial—(cheers)—and it would be wrong, and members would be false to the constituencies they represented, if they did not give the Ministry a fair trial. (Cheers.)

Mr. SLATTERY, being called for and heartily cheered, said that five years' experience as a member of Parliament had shown him that those who devoted their services to the public by entering public life were deserving, not only of sympathy but of public respect (cheers), and referring to the Premier's candidature for the Murrumbidgee, he expressed his conviction that next Saturday night it would be found that Mr. Dibbs had been returned to the head of the poll. (Cheers.) They would find that the electors in that important electorate were true to the great public trust placed in their hands, and recognised the duty they had to perform to themselves and to their children, as well as to the country generally, by returning Mr. Dibbs triumphantly. (Cheers.)

The toast of "The Press" was then proposed by Mr. SLATTERY, and responded to by Mr. HUGH GEORGE, Mr. M. A. CLEARY and Mr. J. H. HONSON, and this having been followed by "The Chairman," which was proposed by Mr. D. WATSON, and enthusiastically received, the proceedings terminated.

IMPORTANT DECISIONS AT THE BEGA LAND COURT.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BEGA, TUESDAY.

The land court, at its sittings yesterday and to-day, disposed of a large number of cases of no public importance. The selectors in many instances were surprised at the arbitrary rules of measurement, making them in hilly precipitous country to abandon the land rather than to submit to modifications suggested by the district surveyor. This shows the absurdity of legislating in the same clauses for plain and hilly country. A novel point, which was raised by Mr. Rawlinson, solicitor, was settled by the board. In the case of Allan versus Gilroy, recently heard in Equity, the Judge decreed that the sale of 200 acres was good before Gilroy selected 440 acres additional. Allan has since selected the same land, and the contention was that Gilroy, having sold his land, though not transferred in the land books, had no right to select an additional block, therefore as Gilroy's selection was had ab inutio, Allan's should stand. Mr. Curtis, solicitor, who gave notice of appeal, opposed Mr. Rawlinson's view, contending that the land must be declared forfeited, and, after due notice, be open for selection. The board supported the view that Gilroy, having effected the sale, had no right to the additional selection, which was therefore void. This is the first time that such a point has been raised. Another important point was raised before court. A mortgagee selects a certain area, the mortgagor finding the money. The former in his declaration states that he has only an interest as mortgagee, under the 121st clause of the Land Act. It was contended by the board that such a selection would not hold, thus upsetting the rights of banks and other financial institutions to select as mortgagees. The board decided to refer the point to the Minister for Lands.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—TUESDAY, OCTOBER 27.

In Banco.—(Before their Honors the CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice FAUCETT, and Mr. Justice WINDEYER.)

WILSON AND ANOTHER V. DIBBS.

The action which gave rise to the present motion was brought by the plaintiffs to recover damages for breach of a contract made under the following circumstances. Certain goods (a quantity of oil) had been shipped by the plaintiffs to the defendant, under an agreement providing for payment by bills of exchange payable at 90 days. The declaration set out the agreement by which the defendant agreed to accept these bills, and alleged as a breach that the defendant did not accept the said bills. The defendant pleaded, by way of cross action, that it was a form of the contract that the goods in respect of which the bills were drawn should be delivered up to the defendant on payment of the bills at maturity; but that the plaintiffs, knowing that the defendant was ready and willing to pay the bills at maturity, refused to deliver the goods to the defendant, but sold them at a price below their value, and caused damage to the defendant equal to the claim of the plaintiffs. At that stage of the case a demurrer was filed. This demurrer came on for argument on May 7, and judgment was delivered in the defendant's favour on June 5, the Court holding that the acceptance of the bills of exchange was not a condition precedent to the delivery of the goods; and that the refusal to accept the bills did not amount to a rescission of the contract. On the 7th September the trial of the action came on before Mr. Justice Faucett and a jury of four, who returned a verdict for the plaintiffs.

Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C. (Mr. Pring with him), now moved for a rule nisi for a new trial upon the following grounds:—1. That his Honor was in error in holding that there was no evidence of the promise alleged in the fourth plea, namely, that the goods should be delivered to the defendant in payment of the bills at maturity. 2. That his Honor should have told the jury that there was evidence that the defendant had accepted the first bill of exchange. 3. That his Honor should have ruled that the defendant's letters of the 24th April, 1880, constituted an acceptance in law of the first bill of exchange.

Mr. Stephen's main contention was that the promise by the defendant to accept was an acceptance in law.

Mr. Darley, Q.C., and Mr. Knox held watching briefs on behalf of the plaintiffs.

The CHIEF JUSTICE, delivering the judgment of the Court, said:—The questions involved in this case are very peculiar, and upon the whole we think, without expressing any opinion, that the better course will be to let the rule go, in order that the matter may have our full consideration.

Rule granted.

FROY V. BALMAIN STEAM FERRY COMPANY.

Mr. O'Connor (the Attorney-General with him), for the plaintiff, moved, in accordance with leave reserved at the trial, for a rule nisi to set aside the verdict, which was entered for defendant. It will be remembered that the action was brought (under the Employers' Liability Act, 46 Vic., No 6) by Froy, who, while in the employment of the defendants, and in discharge of his duties as engineer in one of their boats, was injured while repairing one of the floats of a paddle-wheel. At the trial before Mr. Justice Faucett the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff, with £156 damages, equivalent to one year's salary. But his Honor said that he was bound by the case of Hanson v. the A. S. N. Co. (5 N. S. W. L. R., 447) to direct the verdict to be entered for the defendant. That case decided that a seaman, for whose protection other statutes provided, was not entitled to avail himself of the provisions of the Employers' Liability Act.

The rule was now asked for on the point reserved at the trial, namely, that the plaintiff being an engineer, and not bound by any ship's articles, was an artificer or labourer, and not a seaman within the meaning of Hanson's case.

The rule was granted.

Mr. Cohen then moved for a cross rule. The declaration contained common law counts as well as counts under the statute. He moved on the grounds (1) that there was no negligence on the part of the captain of the steamer; (2) that the captain was not a person in superintendence over the plaintiff within the meaning of the Act. He pointed out that according to the plaintiff's own showing he had only told a boy that he was going into the wheel to mend it; and that by not telling the captain the plaintiff had been guilty of contributory negligence. This rule also was granted as asked.

GRIFFITHS AND ANOTHER V. DURACK.

This is a case of considerable interest to squatters and stock and station agents. The trial of the action at sittings prius before his Honor the Chief Justice and a jury of four was reported in our columns on Tuesday, September 22. The action was brought by Messrs. Griffiths and Weaver, stock and station agents, against Mr. Durack, to recover £1500 commission on the sale of Thylungra, Galway Downs, and Sullan stations, in Queensland, under circumstances which will sufficiently appear from their Honors' judgments. At the trial the plaintiff was nonsuited. Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C. (Mr. Reid with him), instructed by Messrs. Stephen, Laurence, and Jaques, moved for a rule nisi for a new trial on the grounds (1) that his Honor nonsuited the plaintiffs, whereas there was evidence in support of the plaintiffs' case which ought to have been allowed to go to the jury; (2) that there was evidence to go to the jury on which the jury might have found for the plaintiffs on a quantum meruit.

Mr. Salomons, Q.C., and Mr. Rogers, instructed by Mr. Frechid, held watching briefs for the defendant.

The CHIEF JUSTICE said that in this case the defendant was owner of large squatting stations, and, being desirous of disposing of them, he put himself in communication with three sets of agents in Melbourne, Sydney, and Queensland. They had authority from the defendant to negotiate for the sale of these properties for £150,000. The property was actually put up for sale in Melbourne, but not sold. At that sale a Mr. Stewart made a bid. He appears to have been a squatter himself in the defendant's neighbourhood. The commission of 1 per cent., which was sued for, seemed to be a very large amount on such a sum as £150,000. A correspondent of the plaintiffs took some trouble for the purpose of disposing of the property, and negotiations were made with Mr. Stewart (though the plaintiffs never had any communication with him), who was manager of a pastoral company, with which he afterwards severed his connection. On the 19th February, 1884, the defendant, by telegram, revoked the plaintiffs' authority to sell, and that revocation was completed by a letter of the 25th February. At that time no sale had been effected. In the following April a new pastoral company was formed for the purpose, among other things, of obtaining possession of the defendant's property, some of Stewart's, and some belonging to other people. The defendant was persuaded by Stewart to become a partner in this concern, and it was arranged that he should receive £75,000 in cash and £75,000 worth of shares, and some time afterwards this transaction was completed. That having been done, a claim was made by the plaintiffs, after some correspondence, for commission, on the ground that Stewart was introduced by the plaintiff before their authority was revoked. If the subsequent transaction could be recognised as a sale, then the plaintiffs' case would be a good one. The law is that if an agent introduces a person who actually purchases after the agent's authority is revoked, the agent is entitled to his commission. But the turning-point in this case was this—Was it a sale? Two months after an unquestioned revocation, Stewart, with others, formed a company. This could not be recognised as a sale. The defendant disposed of his property, but not by a sale of the kind which the plaintiffs were employed to effect. It might be possible in a similar case the agents might be entitled to recover on a quantum meruit, but not in a case like this, where such a large remuneration as 1 per cent. was offered on a sale for £150,000. No particular skill was required. The agency was accepted on the mere chance of obtaining a purchaser. No such chance occurred, and the plaintiffs did nothing to merit payment. His Honor then read an extract from a letter of the plaintiffs to the defendant, dated 24th April, 1884:—"We have heard rumours of the formation of a company to purchase your properties for £150,000, and shall hope to congratulate you soon on the matter being brought to a final and happy issue. We learn also that a Mr. Stewart, formerly of Mitchell, is one of the chief men in the proposed company, and we and M., L., and S. (M'Dermott, Loughinan, and Scarr) feel that he should have completed the negotiations through us, as he commenced it with them in Melbourne, where he was present at the sale, and endeavoured to buy. M., L., and S. are also anxious about the commission, but we point out to them that we have no reason to believe that you would forget us altogether after all the trouble we have taken; and also, we point out to them, that even if you had forgotten us, we should easily be able to take steps to enforce our claims, for if Mr. Stewart has had any hand in the formation of the company, our firms are undoubtedly entitled to the commission." His Honor concluded by pointing out that from that letter it was evident that the plaintiffs thought they had no claim to commission.

Mr. Justice FAUCETT was of the same opinion. He thought that the plaintiffs had no justification for saying that Stewart was introduced by them within the meaning of the rule of law relating to such matters. He also agreed with his Honor the Chief Justice as to the meaning of the plaintiffs' letter, which seemed to admit that they had no legal claim, but at the same time contained a threat that they would take proceedings for their commission.

Mr. Justice WINDEYER concurred. The plaintiffs were employed to effect a sale right out.

Rule refused.

ANDERSON V. SPOFFORTH.

This was a special case by way of appeal from a conviction under the Betting Houses Act (39 Vic., No. 28). The case arose in connection with an establishment known as the Chester Club.

Mr. O'Connor, instructed by Mr. Wallace, appeared for the appellant; Mr. Salomons, Q.C., and Mr. Armstrong, were for Inspector Anderson, who laid the information; and Mr. Rogers appeared for the Crown, who was interested in the penalty imposed. Mr. O'Connor had not completed his argument when the Court rose. The case, therefore, stands part heard.

In Public Chambers.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice WINDEYER.)

WOODS V. DUNNING.

Some time ago the plaintiff obtained a writ of ca. re. for the arrest of the defendant, whom he was suing for a debt incurred in the printing and publishing of certain theatrical hand-bills in connection with Dunning's Opera Company. This ca. re. was granted on the ground that the defendant was about to leave the colony; but afterwards, on its being shown that the defendant with his company was only going to Newcastle, the ca. re. was set aside, the terms being the payment into Court of £110 by way of special bail to abide the event of the action. This resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff.

Mr. Pring, for the plaintiff, instructed by Messrs. Robertson, Fisher, and Ralfe, now moved for an order for the money to be paid out of Court. He referred to Rule 13 of the Rules of Court of 10th May, 1856 (Pilch. 538). Mr. M'Laughlin opposed on the ground that it was only incurring an unnecessary expense to take out this order. The money could be taken out without it.

His HONOR made the order, but without costs.

Divorce.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice WINDEYER.)

LADD V. LADD.

The petitioner in this case is the wife. On the motion of Mr. A. Gordon, jun., instructed by Messrs. Gannon and M'Laughlin, issues were settled—1. Marriage; 2 adultery; and the case was ordered to be set down for hearing on November 10.

JONES V. JONES.

Petition for judicial separation by the wife. Mr. Gordon, jun., instructed by Mr. J. M. Curtis, appeared for the petitioner to settle issues. Marriage being admitted, the issue settled was cruelty, from 31st January, 1878, to September, 1880. The case to be tried before his Honor without a jury on the 10th November. Another application was made by Mr. Gordon, who asked for security for costs. Mr. Ralston, who appeared for the respondent, instructed by Mr. W. Roberts, took the objection that though when a wife was respondent she could obtain an order for payment of costs incurred in her defence, yet there was no authority for such an order being made when the wife was petitioner. The application was postponed till Friday.

M'KECHNIE V. M'KECHNIE AND BRIAN.

Mr. Gordon, instructed by Mr. G. J. Sly, moved to settle issues. Mr. Ralston applied for money to be paid into court for wife's expenses of defence. Order made for £25 to be paid into court. Answer to be filed before this day week. Short notice of trial to be taken.

O'HARA V. O'HARA.

Husband's petition. On the motion of Mr. West, further service on the respondent was dispensed with. Issues were settled—1. Marriage; 2. adultery, and the case was set down for trial without a jury on 10th November.

BLACK V. BLACK.

In this case the husband is the petitioner. Mr. Ralston, instructed by Messrs. Shorter and Fitzgerald, moved to settle issues—1. Marriage; 2. adultery. The case to be set down for trial 12th November, before his Honor, without a jury, and the hearing to be advertised.

WILKIE V. WILKIE.

Mr. Nash, instructed by Messrs. Daintrey and Gilder, moved to add one James M'Gee as a co-respondent. Granted.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—TUESDAY, OCTOBER 27.

(Before the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.)

CERTIFICATE MEETINGS.

His HONOR directed that on payment of Court charges and expenses certificates should be issued to Patrick Donnelly, Peter Mullens, Elias Cohen, John Wensley, Thomas Howell, and Charles Page.

In the matter of Samuel Elliott. His HONOR said that he could not see upon the evidence that insolvent had been guilty of fraudulent preference, but it would have been much wiser if he had sequestrated his estate at an earlier period. He would suspend his certificate for two months, at the end of which time it would issue on payment of Court charges and expenses.

In the matter of Arthur William Mills and Howard Edward Mills. The respective applications were adjourned to the fourth Tuesday in June, and his Honor directed that notice be published in two Birmingham papers, and insolvents to have till the 31st December to file any affidavits they may be advised as to the averments in the report of the official assignee.

In the matter of Charles Foote. The application was adjourned for six months, and insolvent was directed to file supplementary schedule by the 31st December next, and call a special meeting for proof of debt and to account for his insolvency. His Honor remarked that it was perfectly ridiculous that insolvents should neglect to do what was required by law, and then come up and ask for their certificates.

The several applications of George L. A. Davies and Joseph George Mylecharane were adjourned to the 24th November; and the respective applications of Robert Mann and Samuel Pearson were struck out.

SURRENDERS.

George Henry Humphries, of Moree, labourer. Liabilities, £117 17s. 7d. Assets, £50. Mr. L. T. Lloyd, official assignee.

Mayer Mandell, of Elizabeth-street, Sydney, late of Mudgee, retail jeweller. Liabilities, £176 1s. 1d. Assets, £38. Mr. F. Macnab, official assignee.

Henry Moseley, of Balmain-road, Leichhardt, carpenter. Liabilities, £23 11s. 5d. Assets, £3. Mr. E. M. Stephen, official assignee.

COMPULSORY SEQUESTRATION.

Miles Kennedy Bryce v. Carl von Bieren, formerly of Narrabeen, powder manufacturer. Rule nisi returnable November 12. Mr. F. Macnab, official assignee.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.—TUESDAY.

First Court.—(Before Mr. District Court Judge DOWLING.)

WILLIS V. SUTTON.

This case was partly heard yesterday. R. H. Willis, the plaintiff, sued Peter Sutton, trading as Peter Sutton and Co., residing at Arbitration-street, Circular Quay, for £200, for damage done to certain machinery. Defendants are carriers, and carried the lead plate of a Bolt-Coleman refrigerating machine for plaintiff from Queensland Steam Shipping Company's Wharf to another wharf. On delivering the machinery, which was alleged to have been in a perfect condition when taken charge of by the defendants, was found to have been "broken, damaged, and spoiled." The defendants did not deny that the machinery had been broken, but they urged that one of the conditions stipulated for the safe carriage of the goods was that no single piece of the machinery should be heavier than 2 tons, whereas they stated that this weight had been very much exceeded, with the result that the cart used by the defendants for the purpose was broken and the piece of machinery smashed. They claimed £50 as a set-off for loss sustained by the breaking of their cart, on which the plaintiff had placed a piece of machinery far exceeding the weight agreed upon. Defendants further claimed £16 6s. for hire of horses and carts for the carriage of the machinery, which was in 12 packages, with a gross weight of nearly 20 tons, from the wharf named to Kurrajong, on the 14th of July last. Mr. Field, instructed by Mr. George Wallis, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Wise, instructed by Messrs. Bradley and Son, for the defendants. After hearing a good deal of evidence, his Honor allowed a set-off of £12 10s. for the carriage of the machinery, and gave a verdict for the plaintiff for £137 10s.

SUPREME COURT ISSUES.

Two issues were brought down from the Supreme Court. In one case James Tanner, the plaintiff, claimed £60 from Thomas Cosgrove, the defendant, for goods sold, money lent, and on account of dishonoured cheques. It appeared that the defendant gave the plaintiff two cheques drawn on the English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered Bank—one on September 13, 1884, for £8 8s. 6d., and another a few days afterwards, for £19 11s. 6d.—which were dishonoured after due notice had been given to the defendant to pay. Plaintiff claimed payment of the cheques and interest on the same from their respective dates of issue until judgment, as also the goods alleged to have been sold to the defendant by the plaintiff. The defendant set up a counter claim of £30 for stabling plaintiff's horse from Jan. 1, 1884, at the rate of £1 per week. A verdict was ultimately given for the plaintiff for £36 2s. 6d. In the other case, Joseph Duffy claimed £30 from Fariola de Rozzile for goods supplied. A verdict was given for the plaintiff for £29 11s. 2d.

Second Court.—(Before Mr. District Court Judge WILKINSON.)

WILLIS AND ANOTHER V. L. MENSER.

V. W. H. Willis and E. M. Dietrich, wholesale jewellers, trading together as T. Willis and Company, York-street, sued L. Menser, residing at 17, Little Elizabeth-street, S. H., for £10 5s., for goods supplied. The goods in question were a gold albert, value £4, and a gold Geneva watch, value £6 5s. A verdict was given for the plaintiffs for the amount claimed.

FARRY AND CO. V. COLLINS.

Plaintiffs are importers and general merchants carrying on business at 504, George-street, and sued the defendant Wm. Collins, a grocer, residing in Harris-street, Ultimo, for £24 for goods supplied between June, 1883, and November, 1884. A verdict was given for the plaintiff for the amount claimed.

MORRISON AND OTHERS V. BATE AND ANOTHER.

This was one of three cases in which Charles Bate and Charles J. Muston, trading as Bate and Muston at 191, Pitt-street, were the defendants. James Morrison, residing at Port Stephens, the plaintiff in the first case, claimed £26 3s. 6d. from the defendants, for timber—ironbark and gum logs—drawn by plaintiffs for the defendants, in January and April of the present year, to Little Branch Wharf. In the second case Jno. Shewmack claimed £47 14s. 4d., and in the third, Cox claimed £30 10s. 6d. from the same defendants, also on account of timber drawing. Mr. J. M. Thompson appeared for each of the plaintiffs, and Mr. J. Williamson for the defendants. The matter was settled by the consent of all parties, a verdict of £58, including costs, being agreed to in settlement of all three claims.

O. WILLIAMS V. J. JAGGERS.

This was an action to recover £30 for damage caused to a horse and dray owned by plaintiff, who is a van proprietor, by the falling of bricks and mortar from Mort's wool store, Circular Quay, where the defendant, who is a builder and contractor, was making some alterations. Mr. Field, instructed by Mr. G. Wallis, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Gibson, instructed by Mr. G. Murdoch, for the defendant. The case was still unfinished when the Court rose.

STRIKE OF WHARF LABOURERS.

The organised wharf labourers of Sydney have entered into a dispute with the employers on several issues, more or less tangible, with the result that a number of men have withdrawn from the service of two of the principal shipping firms. The most serious turn of the dispute—at least for the labourers themselves—has come about in connection with the employees of Messrs. Dalgety, Blackwood, and Co. It appears that the firm have been in the habit of engaging wharf labourers at fixed wages, on a formal agreement for twelve months. The association stepped in and required all men belonging to it to leave the service of the firm, and nearly 40 of the 80 men working on Messrs. Dalgety and Co.'s wharfs left off work. Yesterday an effort was made by the workmen to induce the firm to accede to their proposals. A deputation, consisting of Mr. Elliott, president of the Wharf Labourers' Association, and delegate from the Newcastle Wharf Labourers; Mr. Wall, secretary to the Seamen's Union and the Maritime Council; and Mr. Ferguson, a delegate from the Maritime Council, met Mr. Knox and Mr. Holland, of Messrs. Dalgety and Co., at the company's wharf, Miller's Point, and held a long interview. The deputation stated their case to be in effect that the rules of the Union laid down that wharf labour should be paid for at the rate of 1s. per hour, and no outside labour employed. The firm had been employing men at fixed wages, which did not amount to 1s. per hour, and the Union men were bound not to work for less, nor to work against outside labourers. It was also urged that the Newcastle wharf labourers' concession of 1s. 1½d. per hour, instead of the 1s. 3d. originally demanded, should be agreed to. Although the Sydney men had taken up the cause of the Newcastle men, they had no intention of striking for a similar increase of wages. The firm had been "boycotted" because of the dispute at Newcastle. The Union did not object to "constant" men being used about the stores, but could not work with them on board foreign-going ships. The deputation proposed, as its view of the difficulty, that the firm should not employ "constant" men on foreign-going ships; and that they should agree to the demands of the Newcastle labourers. In the course of conversation Mr. Knox and Mr. Hilliard replied as to the rate per hour received by the fixed salary men, that these men working under the agreement were actually getting more than 1s. an hour, and were very much better off than the casual men. It was necessary to have men who knew the work of the firm and were used to each other, and therefore men had to be employed on fixed salaries to ensure the work being done and done properly. These men were quite willing to work, but were coerced to leave their work. The rules of the Union—altogether antagonistic to the employers—had been made after the agreements in question were entered into, and, in fact, those agreements were really renewals of previous 12 months' engagements. The firm found work for these men summer and winter, and paid them all the same if they did not work, and they also paid the men for all wet days and holidays, and every man who fell sick got £1 a week. It was pointed out that the Union had not consulted the employers when making their rules, and had gone the wrong way to work in "boycotting" them. The firm would not interfere with the Newcastle matter. The agreements were for 12 months, and the contract rendered the firm liable for the year's pay if cancelled by them, so that that could not be done, and on the other hand the men would have to suffer the consequences, unfortunate to themselves, if they broke their contract. If any one of the demands were acceded to, the firm would still be liable to annoyance on the other grounds mentioned. And as to the employment of "constant" men on the ships, the firm could not allow anyone to come in and manage its business for it. It appeared that the firm had been put to a great deal of inconvenience by the refusal of the men to work, although the salaried men said that they were quite satisfied to go on working if they were permitted. The leader of the deputation himself stated that he would rather work on a guarantee of £2 10s. a week for 12 months than on 1s. an hour for three months, with the liability of discharge at any moment, but his society would not allow him. The interview ended with a distinct answer from Mr. Knox that he would not alter any of the existing arrangements. It is understood that legal proceedings have been taken against the employés who have gone back from their agreements.

The other firm concerned in the dispute is Messrs. W. Howard Smith and Co. In this case the Newcastle difficulty was put forward as a distinct cause of the strike. The firm had been employing wharf labourers at Newcastle at 1s. per hour, and a demand was made by the Union for an additional 3d. This addition the firm declined to give, and on the withdrawal of the Union men, they got outside labour at the old rate without any trouble. The trimmers then took up the question, and on the company again declining to give the additional 25 per cent., outside labour was again obtained to trim the ships, and the company was then threatened with having the seamen, firemen, and trimmers taken out of their ships as they came into Sydney. The captain of the Rodondo was informed that the Union would permit his ship to go out yesterday on her trip, pending the decision of the Newcastle dispute; but, if that decision was unsatisfactory to the Union, they would take the men out of the ships, one by one, as they came in. As there was plenty of labour available at 1s. per hour, the company had no difficulty in getting their ships, the Rodondo and Cheviot, out of port yesterday as arranged.

THE STRIKE IN THE COAL TRADE AT NEWCASTLE.

[By Telegraph.]

(From our own correspondent.)

disagreement is likely to arise between the Newcastle branch of the Australasian Federated Seamen's Union and the Sydney branch. At the meeting last night Alderman Graham, president of the branch, tendered his resignation in consequence of Mr. Josiah Wright, a delegate from Sydney, ignoring the officials of the local branch here in connection with the matter of the strike. A resolution was passed that Mr. Wright's communicating with the You Yang's seamen, without first consulting the local branch officers, warrants inquiry, and his ignoring the officials here deserves the greatest censure. Alderman Graham has been asked to reconsider his resignation.

A meeting of the men on strike was held in the Hall of Science to-day, Mr. F. Austin, the president of the Wharf Labourers' Union, in the chair. Mr. Ely, the secretary, reported that counsel's opinion had been taken respecting the propriety of taking action to recover the wages of the crane men who had left Mr. Russell's employ without notice, and the opinion was that by such action they had legally forfeited the payment. The chairman then referred to a letter signed by Mr. James Fletcher, in the Newcastle Morning Herald, and maintained that the wharf labourers were justified in calling for the assistance of the coal trimmers and crane men in order to obtain a rise in their wages. A donation of £10 from the New South Wales Bootmakers' Union was received. A fresh vigilance committee was elected, and the proceedings closed.

Four of Mr. Russell's crane men have returned to work at the hydraulic cranes. The steamers Fiona, Taramungi, Worongs, Tiverton, the barques Felesina, Nifrara, William M'Laren, Mobile Bay, and the ship W. Gildersleeve, are loading coal at the Queen's wharf. The Belle of Arvon is loading coal at the A. A. Company's wharf. The steamer Gabo is loading coal. Messrs. Howard Smith's boats are being trimmed by a few men brought up from Sydney. The steamer Easby will be berthed to-morrow, and will receive as much coal as possible without trimming.

The Lambton miners are still on strike over the jerry question. At the meeting held here yesterday it was resolved that the men on strike should not be allowed to go to other work whilst on strike funds. There is no appearance of concession on the part of the proprietors.

Tertiary Man.—At the meeting of the French Association at Greenoble, M. de Mortillet read a paper on Tertiary Man before the anthropological section. The question, he said, was not to know whether man already existed in the tertiary epoch as he exists at the present day. Animals varied from one geological stratum to another, and the higher the animals the greater was the variation. It was to be inferred, therefore, that man would vary more rapidly than the other mammals. The problem was to discover in the tertiary period an ancestral form of man, a predecessor of the man of historical times. M. de Mortillet affirmed that there were unquestionably in the tertiary strata objects which implied the existence of an intelligent being. These objects have, in fact, been found at two different stages of the tertiary epoch—in the lower tertiary at Thenay, and in the upper tertiary at Otta, in Portugal, and at Puy Courny, in Cantal. These objects proved that at these two distant epochs there existed in Europe animals acquainted with the use of fire, and able more or less to cut stone. During the tertiary period, then, there lived animals less intelligent than existing man, but much more intelligent than existing apes. M. de Mortillet gives the name of anthropithegue, or ape-man, to the species, which, he maintains, was an ancestral form of historic man, whose skeleton has not yet been discovered, but who has made himself known to us in the clearest manner by his works. A number of flints were exhibited from the strata in question, which had been intentionally chipped and exposed to fire. The general opinion of the savants assembled at Grenoble was that there can no longer be any doubt of the existence in the tertiary period of an ancestral form of man.

What Shall I Drink?—The Lancet says: "We have tested the Montserrat Lime-Fruit Juice and found it sound and free from adulteration. It is a far more wholesome drink than any other form of alcohol." Annual importation over 100,000 gallons, sold by all storekeepers, Sydney. Elliott Brothers.—[Advt.]

Remarkable Disappearance.—Very remarkable disappearance of all dirt from everything by using Hudson's Extract of Soap. Reward—Purity, health, perfect satisfaction, by its regular daily use. N.B.—It is a pure, dry soap in fine powder, and ætherii readily in hot or cold water.—[Advt.]

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

[By Telegraph.]

(From our own correspondents.)

GUNDAGAI, Tuesday.

The Great Victoria Mining Company have washed up their first crushing of 1000 tons, but the returns are kept secret, the gold having been taken down to Sydney by Messrs. Edrop and Burn. Mr. J. M. D. Williams has started to crush a parcel of stone, and the plates look well. Should both mines turn out well, they would give employment to a great number of men.

LUCKNOW, Tuesday.

The manager of the New Reform Gold-mining Company reports:—"I have taken out, crushed, and concentrated the gold ore reported on Friday last, as occurring in the Perseverance monkey shaft stope, weighing 33cwt., with the following highly satisfactory results:—Free gold, £725; gold ore, £800."

PARKES, Tuesday.

The gold escort left here this morning, via Forbes, taking 1317oz. 15dwt. 10gr., the local branch of the Australian Joint Stock Bank sending 1203oz., and the Commercial branch 115oz.

MANAGERS' REPORTS.

Duke Company, Timor, October 24.—No. 3 east rise complete, and driven 23 feet in a promising-looking wash, with heavy water, which makes progress slow. No. 3 west extended in wash 30 feet, rising rapidly. Yield for week, 99oz. 3dwt.: No. 1 tribute, 83oz. 10dwt.; No. 2 tribute, 13oz. 9dwt.; No. 3 tribute, 4oz. 11dwt.

Duke Consols, Timor, October 24.—South drive extended 64 feet. North crosscut has been connected to old workings from No. 2 rise. Hoisting carried on as usual. Yield for week: No. 1 tribute, 29oz. 15dwt.; No. 3 tribute, 2oz. 4dwt.; No. 4 tribute, 1oz. 17dwt.

Last Chance Tribute Company, Ballarat East, October 24.—Bottom level: Have extended main drive north 8 feet for the week in fair working country. All stopes show an improvement in the quantity of stone in sight. Have cleaned up battery. Yield, 68oz. 16dwt. 18gr.

North Woah Dah, Ballarat East, October 24.—Bottom level: Stopes showing plenty of stone of a payable character. Upper level: Sinking winze on indicator. Tributors are raising stone on western lode, quartz showing gold. Will clean up end of week.

Alexandra Hill Gold-mining Co., No Liability, Charters Towers, Queensland, 17th October.—No. 4 south drive was driven 8 feet; total, 28 feet from shaft. There is a small reef in the end which looks of good quality. The ground is easy to work. The formation is 5 feet from each of the walls. No. 3 level was driven 6 feet; total distance from shaft, 336 feet. There is a reef 18 inches in thickness in the end of drive, which looks pretty well. I am stoping over this level on stone of good quality. The winze was sunk 16 feet upon a foot of stone, which looks first-rate. Seventy tons were raised during the fortnight, making 120 tons now in paddock. Everything about the mine is in good working order.

Victory Gold-mining Company, Limited, Charters Towers, Queensland, October 24.—The reef in the shaft still continues about 18 inches in thickness, and shows gold freely. The shaft was sunk 6 feet—total, 44 feet. In No. 6 north and south levels the reef is broken up into small loaders, running through the formation, but shows signs of making into a solid reef again soon. The south drive was driven 11 feet—total, 97 feet; and the north drive 10 feet—total, 116 feet. The stopes above these levels look very well. No. 5 level north carries 18 inches of stone of good quality; it was driven 6 feet—total, 218 feet. The stopes above this level are improving, the reef in them being larger, and of better quality; 100 tons were raised, making a total of 150 tons at surface.

The Silver King Mining Company, Limited, Sunny Corner, 27th October.—The south drive from the winze has been extended a further distance of 5 feet. The lode at this point looks much the same as previously reported. A connencement will now be made to crosscut through the lode to prove its width. This drive makes a considerable quantity of water, as the levels are being extended. South drive.—The crescent has been extended west from this drive a further distance of 9 feet during the week, the lode looks well, and the ore is about 5 feet high in the drive, but as before reported the main body of mineral lies underneath the level of this drive. Outside work.—Twelve men are now continually at work at the reservoir. The concreting of the engine-room is progressing favourably, and sand, which heretofore has been difficult to obtain, can now fortunately be got easily, and the bricklaying will no longer be delayed. The laying of the water pipes is completed, and they have only to be connected with the tanks, five out of the six of which have been already erected and in their places. Furnaces will probably be lit up for drying purposes in the course of a few days.

Wesley Tin-mining Company, Limited.—The yield from the above mine for the month ending 24th instant was 15 tons ore.

New Reform Gold-mining Company, Limited, Lucknow, October 23.—For the fortnight I have crushed 110 tons, raised 50, and thrown out 5. 60 bags of ore on hand. There is also £1000 worth of gold and ore in the face of Perseverance monkey shaft stope, which I will take out, crush, and concentrate on Monday next. Should this system prove effective, it will be adopted in future, so that assays may be obtained in place of sending home in bulk as hitherto. All the new machinery will be fully completed during next week, and the cutting out of reservoir upon 300 feet level proceeded with prior to sinking main shaft a further 100 feet. Machinery in connection with battery and buddle as usual.

Lubra Silver-mining Company, October 16.—"The new find is another drop of the same lode as we are working on in the Lubra North. I have followed the lode in Lubra West down to the depth of 19 feet without any material change since my last report. The lode in Lubra North is nipping considerably. By the appearance of the lode in the face of the stopes at the present time it would be advisable to sink deeper on the lode. When these deposits of ore tail out they are a long distance apart on the same level, but often have a downward tendency." Under date October 26 the mining manager telegraphs: "Lode improving by following it deeper. Last week have taken out 1½ ton good ore."

The following is a return of copper received at Darling Harbour station for the week ended 17th October, 1885:—Station, Nyngan, 50 tons 5cwt.; George's Plains, 12 tons, 10cwt.; total, 71 tons, 15cwt. The quantity of tin ore received at Newcastle and Morpeth for the week ended 17th October was as follows:—To Newcastle, from Moonbi, 2 tons; from Guyra, 2 tons 4cwt. 1qr. 11lb. To Morpeth, from Glen Innes, 11 tons 2cwt. 2qr. 22lb; from Guyra, 6 tons 11cwt. 1qr. 9lb.; from Uralla, 5 tons 1cwt. 1qr.; total, 26 tons 19cwt. 2qr. 8lb.

NORTH SHORE PIONEER INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

Active steps are being taken in connection with the proposed Pioneer Industrial Exhibition on the North Shore. The main objects of the exhibition are stated to be—(1) To exercise a salutary influence on existing manufactures. (2) To stimulate the development of fresh industries. (3) To assist in educating the young. (4) The union of art and labour. (5) To pioneer the way for future industrial exhibitions. (6) To obtain a nucleus fund for the erection of a cottage hospital at North Shore. The positions of patron and president are not yet filled. The other offices are all are:—The Hons. W. Bode Dalley, Alexander Dodds, filled by North Shore residents. The vice-presidents Francis Lord, and J. P. Abbott, Messrs. John Whitton, C.E., W. H. Tulloh, J.P., P. N. Trebeck, J.P., James Thomson, and the Rev. Alfred Yarnold. There is a ceremonial committee, consisting of the following gentlemen:—W. H. Tulloh, J.P., chairman; B. Jenkins, J.P., Mayor of St. Leonards; Howard Fleming, Mayor of North Willoughby, C. R. Austin, Mayor of Manly; E. M. Clark, Mayor of East St. Leonards, and Mr. Macmahon, J.P., Mayor of Victoria; also Messrs. Lewis Solomon, J.P., Professor Dixon, F.C.S., P. F. Richardson, J.P., A. Armstrong, J.P., W. H. M'Keown, J.P., G. R. Whiting, J.P., W. P. Cullen L.c.B. (Barrister at Law), J. R. Love, R Harnett, R. Grant, John Plummer, A. C. Shadler, Donnelly Fisher, Rev. J. F. Cullen, Charles H. Hayes (of the Sydney Exchange), W. J. M'Leod (Master of the St. Leonards Sanaritan Masonic Lodge), and W. H. Howard (Master of the Robert Burns Lodge of Freemasons). There is also an industrial directorate, consisting of a chairman, three vice-chairmen, and 24 business men and manufacturers, and two honorary secretaries, Messrs. W. P. Cullen and Frank B. Treatt. The exhibition will have no alliance with politico-economic problems of any school. The fundamental principles underlying it are self-reliance, energy, and co-operation. Already large promises of support from the local manufacturers have been made, and North Shore clay and pottery ware will be well represented. The strict lines laid down are quality and not quantity, and the exhibition is to be made, as its name implies, a pioneer one—a model of success for future exhibitions. With the permission of the Minister for Public Instruction, it is proposed to stir up a competition in the direction of excellence and finish amongst the boys and girls attending the North Shore Public schools in writing, drawing, and needlework. A stand of Australian patents will form a special feature. Great interest is already evinced amongst the members of the industrial classes, and in one shop alone six of the workmen have determined to exhibit each for himself a specimen of his best handiwork, as an example and encouragement to others. The exhibition is to be held about the third week in January. At a public meeting to be held in the Masonic Hall, Walker-street, St. Leonards, on Friday evening next, the 30th instant, at 8 p.m., a formal ratification of all the steps taken in the interests of the district will be sought. As previously stated, the net proceeds of the exhibition will be devoted to the purpose of building a cottage hospital, thus uniting industry and charity in a firm embrace.

AMUSEMENTS.

CONCERT AT Y. M. C. A. HALL.

The entertainment in the Association Hall last evening scarcely realised the announcement respecting it. Miss Grace Mountain, whose name appeared as that of the giver of the concert is, it is believed, a pupil of Herr Max Vogrich, and has received a certificate from her teacher as regards her capabilities as a pianist, but the lady is not known as a teacher of singing, and to judge by the manner in which the concert was carried out, it would seem that the several persons engaged had made their preparations separately, and arranged proceedings as the concert progressed. The conductor consulted, or left his place to speak with the pianist between each number in the first part, and appeared very uncertain as to the powers of the singers. There may be reasons of which the audience are unaware, such as want of rehearsal, irregular attendance of chorus, a desire to save expense in engaging professional aid, or choosing soloists on other grounds than musical fitness for their work; but certain it is that from whatever cause the performance was not of such a character as to give pleasure to a musical audience, or to raise the standard of musical taste. Miss Grace Mountain played the accompaniments to a cantata, "The Singers from the Sea," by Behrend (a pupil of Reinecke, of Swedish family, and on the maternal side a grandson of Balfe). This was sung by a chorus of about 30 ladies, the recits. and other soli parts being taken by Mrs. J. Wheeler, Miss Cromack, Mrs. Innes, Miss Walker, Miss Linton, and Miss Hurley. Hearing the music for the first time, the impression is that it is below the quality some of the songs and trios by the same composer would lead one to expect, and with the exception of Mrs. Innes, the soloists were unequal to their work, though there is material that with good training would be valuable. The singers were, however, much appreciated by sections of the audience; the applause was apparently given to the individual, irrespective of musical ability, as when "The Fairie Ring" was encored, though the rendering was in most elementary style. The final chorus was also encored. The second part consisted of 11 numbers, vocal and instrumental. Of the latter, the duet for two pianos, by Misses Grace Mountain and L. Peak, was greatly marred through the arrangement of the two grand pianofortes. The players were back to back, and the second frequently came after instead of with the first. From nervousness, too, probably, in playing octaves, double notes, or chords, the notes were sounded in succession, rather than simultaneously. Miss G. Mountain played Chopin's "Fantaisie Impromptu" in an artistic and scholarly manner, and received more bouquets than she could carry from the stage. Mrs. Innes in "The Lost Chord" was not so successful as usual, the most telling parts seemed to come on the break in her voice, or perhaps the instrument was higher than the pitch of that to which she has sung the song previously; she took the tempo too slow unless an organ is used in the accompaniment. Mr. J. Callaghan, who is one of the most recently developed principal vocalists, whose prominently out in his singing of "My sweetheart when a boy," though his enunciation is not distinct; and also in the quartettes "Lorelei" (Silcher, 1789–1860), and the Serenade (Marschner), in which his solo has already gained laurels in the Metropolitan Liedertafel. Mrs. Gray sang "The child's letter to heaven," Misses Walker and Cromach "The flight of the swallow." Professor Clampett, who was announced to sing "The two worlds," Campana, had been unable to obtain the music and substituted "Flow gently, Deva" with Mr. Baptie. The vigorous style of the baritone is opposed to the somewhat lackadaisical mode of the tenor, and the result was not satisfactory musically; but the singers accepted the applause in its most liberal sense, and gave Mendelssohn's "I would that my love," in funereal measure as regards tempo. The chorus sang "Wreathe ye the steps," Schumann, and the "Thuringian Volkslied," concluding with the National Anthem. As the result of good intentions with regard to the building fund, the concert was praiseworthy, and the performers doubtless did their best in work to which they were strange. Had the arrangements been in the hands of skilful managers greater proficiency would probably have been found in the vocal parts. The audience was numerous, but many left before the conclusion of the programme.

THE ALL SAINTS AUXILIARY OF THE CHURCH SOCIETY.

A meeting of the parishioners of All Saints', Woollahra, was held last night in the church schoolroom, in connection with the affairs of the All Saints' Branch of the Church Society. There was a moderately large gathering, and among those present were the Bishop of Sydney, who presided; the Rev. G. North Asche; the Hon. A. Gordon, Q.C., M.L.C.; the Hon. E. Knox, M.L.C.; the Hon. F. M. Darley, Q.C., M.L.C., Mr. Geo. Knox; Mr. A. W. Gillies, Mr. R. Chadwick, and Mr. N. Dowling.

A financial statement was read by the Secretary, Mr. Dowling, showing that the receipts for the year amounted to £227, and that the returns for 1884 were £53 in advance of those of 1883.

The Bishop having referred to the financial affairs of the society went on to say that he would ask the meeting to consider not merely the financial work of the society, but the real work of the Church itself. The purpose of the society was to give the necessary external scope for the exercise of the enduring power which belonged to the Church of Christ; and if men more fully and vitally realised what was the work of the Church in general, and of the Church of England in particular, there would be no necessity for descending to the most painful task of continually begging for money. The work of the Church had two great directions. The first was the individual work of the ministry of the Church of Christ dealing with the individual personality of each man; his hidden life, which was a matter of such sacred secrecy that it could scarcely be spoken of on such an occasion. The other direction of the Church had a bearing on the higher life and real progress of humanity at large; on human civilisation in the very truest sense. Civilisation always involved something of individual cultivation and education, and the power of collective feeling and corporate action; and civilisation so understood really covered all the true individual and collective progress of humanity. There had been civilisations which had flourished and passed away; but there was one civilisation which as yet showed no signs of decline or demoralisation, although it had its faults, its excrescenses, and its dangers, and that was the modern European civilisation. It was a remarkable fact, or coincidence, that this modern European civilisation, the one civilisation which was constantly advancing, extending and aggressing from age to age, was undoubtedly the one which from its very beginning was deeply inspired and impregnated with that vivifying power of Christianity. The Church of Christ existed that it might constantly thus inspire and impregnate human progress and civilisation with the life and power of Christianity. The word "progress" was often used roughly and carelessly. It had many parts; the acquirement of material wealth, of freedom, or of knowledge, all of which were, after all, merely the means to gain a higher end. The real true civilisation was the moral and spiritual civilisation. The question was whether the world was any richer, freer, wiser, and better as a religious reality, and if we wished to contribute to the real progress of humanity, it must be by leaving the world better, truer, wiser, holier, and purer than we found it. For this the Church of Christ existed; that it manifested its undying power in days gone by, that it guided and inspired European civilisation, of which we were the heirs, and would continue to exercise its influence on all new civilisations growing up under the civilising English race. And he trusted that this was the end which the Church of Christ was seeking in this land, where it had to deal with peculiar difficulties, but where it had undoubtedly visible fruit in answer to all true endeavour. There was a peculiar duty and responsibility laid upon the Church of England in this great work, as by reason of its system, which had grown up like the Constitution itself, with certain apparent anomalies and irregularities which showed its real correspondence with human nature, it had exercised peculiar and unexampled power on English society in all its branches. The future of this country would very largely depend on the extent to which this work was carried on by the Church, and they would therefore see how great was the responsibility laid on them to use every effort, by means of thought, labour, money, and prayer, to further these great and noble objects. The question was before the laity whether they would adequately grasp this opportunity, and enter on that labour without which the work could not be done. He did not think that the resources of the Church Society were at all adequate, and believing that the future of the Church Society depended on the work of its auxiliaries, he had come there to try and quicken and help this auxiliary work. He referred to a plan drawn out by Canon Gunther, as to what an auxiliary should be, and how it should work, and he hoped the model put before them would be acted upon. He urged all of them to ask themselves individually what they would do to help the work of the Church. (Applause.)

The Rev. S. Tovey moved:—"That this meeting regards with feelings of thankfulness to Almighty God, the increase which has taken place in the income of the society, but at the same time recognises the necessity of a still more extensive and generous support to the society, with a view to the accomplishment of its important objects."

The Hon. A. Gordon seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

On the motion of Mr. George Knox, seconded by the Hon. F. M. Darley, the following list of officers for 1885 was adopted:—President, the Rev. H. Wallace Mort, M.A.; treasurer, Mr. Neville Dowling; secretary, Mr. Charles Baker; representatives, the Hon. F. M. Darley and Mr. G. N. Russell; committee, the trustees and churchwardens of All Saints, Sir W. M. Manning, the Hon. J. B. Watt (M.L.C.), Mr. W. Larmer, the Rev. E. T. Wood (M.A.), Mr. G. N. Russell, Mr. W. Armstrong (B.A.), Mr. W. May, and Mr. W. Dove.

A vote of thanks to the Bishop was heartily accorded, and the meeting terminated.

Professor Thorold Rogers M.P., has made a very important discovery while pursuing his investigations at Cambridge for additional volumes of his work on the "History of Prices." This is a set of accounts kept at King's College during 120 years, with the exception of one year, beginning with the year 1583. There is information accessible with regard to the missing year, so that the series of accounts is practically complete for the entire period. In addition to the facts furnished by the prices, these accounts contain many curious details illustrative of social life in olden days.

THE ARGENTINE CONFEDERATION—ANOTHER ASPECT.

In the English and colonial press a number of articles have appeared of late, pointing out to investors the peculiar suitability of the lands of the Argentine Confederation in South America for stock raising purposes. That it has this merit has been generally admitted, but it has other drawbacks which have not been alluded to, and which, when fully exposed, will be quite sufficient to prevent any but the rashest speculators from embarking capital in the enterprises of the confederation.

Mr. A. J. Wilson, in his work "The Resources of Modern Countries," gives the following account of that unhappy Republic:—"The Argentine Confederation, adjoining Uruguay, lies on the other side of the Uruguay River and the La Plata Estuary, and stretches northward by the side of Paraguay to the borders of Bolivia and Brazil and westwards to Chili. It is in some respects in a worse plight than Uruguay, and in others much better. High-sounding as the name is, the Republic itself is a very ill-hung-together group of so-called provinces, not one of which has at present any good government, or, if we except that of Buenos Ayres, any substantial realised wealth. There are European settlers all over the Riverine provinces, it is true, and the territory between the Uruguay and the Parana is admirably suited for nearly every description of farming, so much so that it has attracted not a few Englishmen. There are also islands in the interior of a very high quality, which, although deprived of water communication with the east coast, might if peopled and well governed support comfortable and even wealthy communities. In short, nearly the whole of the eastern and central parts of the Republic, as well as a great proportion of Buenos Ayres, and perhaps some of the land south in Entre Rios del Sur, are well suited for the European colonist, and might become the seat of a wealthy and highly civilised nation. Nearly all these advantages have, however, been hitherto vitiated by bad government and internecine strife. The confederation has almost always been more a name than a reality, mainly because the maritime provinces of Buenos Ayres which, as lying at the throat of the country so to say, and possessing much of the finest land in the temperate region, was best peopled and richest of all the settlements in the south determined, and still determines, to be supreme, and to legislate in effect for all the rest. The Argentines are bent on aping the United States, and must have their provincial legislatures by the dozen, whether they can afford them or not, each of which goes its own way and defies the central Government when the whim takes it. Accepting the facts as they stand, we find that the Argentine Confederation at present practically makes no progress at all, but that lately it has to all appearances been going backward. The supreme Government is too weak-kneed to be able to punish offences, political or other, done in the provinces, or sometimes even at its own doors, and rebellion is, therefore, at times the most profitable trade a man can do. The more successful he is, the more certain is his pardon and probable advent to power. A crying want of the inland country is railways, in order that they may share the markets of the more favoured provinces; and so railways have been built in all directions, often quite without regard to the chances of their paying, chiefly "The flight of the swallow." Professor Clampett, who was announced to sing "The two worlds," Campana, had been unable to obtain the music and substituted "Flow gently, Deva" with Mr. Baptie. The vigorous style of the baritone is opposed to the somewhat lackadaisical mode of the tenor, and the result was not satisfactory musically; but the singers accepted the applause in its most liberal sense, and gave Mendelssohn's "I would that my love," in funereal measure as regards tempo. The chorus sang "Wreathe ye the steps," Schumann, and the "Thuringian Volkslied," concluding with the National Anthem. As the result of good intentions with regard to the building fund, the concert was praiseworthy, and the performers doubtless did their best in work to which they were strange. Had the arrangements been in the hands of skilful managers greater proficiency would probably have been found in the vocal parts. The audience was numerous, but many left before the conclusion of the programme.

The well-known London paper, Truth, referring to recent attempts of the Confederation to swell its debts by new loans in London, says:—"The latest scheme for extracting money from the pockets of the British investor for the benefit of the Argentine Republic appears to have exploded, although I can hardly realise that it was seriously entertained. Strangely enough, the refusal comes from the Argentine Senate, who have rejected their financial doctor's—Pellegrini's—proposal for raising funds in England. Probably the terms of the loan-mongers were too onerous, but, then, even the gullible British investor would have objected to subscribe to any more Argentine loans except on special terms, and on all hands he may be congratulated that he is not to be tempted. The country is in a state of semi-revolution. Insurrectionary movements occur frequently. To the three candidates for the Presidency—Rocha, Irigoyen, and Calman, a fourth, Gorostiaga, the chosen of the clerical party, has been added. A revolutionary outbreak occurred, according to recent advices, in Corrientes, on the report of which the gold premium jumped from 30, at which it had been standing for some time, to 50. The financial difficulties and high Customs duties, combined with that curse of Central and South American Republics, political agitation, put a stop to business, and capital is leaving the country. The Senate is said to advocate a loan to be raised in Buenos Ayres. How this would be possible in the present state of affairs is more than I can say, but it is manifestly imperative that British capitalists should allow the Argentines to stew in their own fat."

The PATENTS and TRADE MARKS BILL.

III.—PATENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The English Act of 1883, so far as patents are concerned, is principally a consolidation of previous Acts of Parliament. There had been no material statutory alterations in patent law since 1852, and the amendments introduced by the Act were principally those recommended by a Committee of the House of Commons in the year 1876. It will, as before stated, be very advisable to adapt English law in the old channels of theoretical legislation, with all the approved amendments which have been enacted. But there are nevertheless some defects of omission which should be rectified; and other valuable provisions and amendments, not involving constitutional changes, may, I think, be introduced, which I now suggest for consideration.

Imprimis, as regards local requirements, I would direct attention to the urgent necessity of providing for amendment in existing New South Wales patents. The Patent Acts of most countries have furnished more or less facility for the means of doing so by disclaimer, correction, or explanation, as set out in the bill, being an extension of the law existing in England prior to the passing of the recent enfranchisement. For the want of such facilities, many patent grants of a valuable character procured in this colony under the present Act will be found useless; in fact, absolutely void if tested. The sections of a new Act giving the patentee the opportunity of disclaimer, correction, or explanation as to the patents granted thereunder should be likewise applicable to patents already granted in the colony.

Legislation of exceptional service to the inventor would be the adoption of some articles of the French code (also the law in other European countries), as to certificates of addition, &c. An invention cannot often be perfected until brought into actual operation, when improvements take place, or alterations not necessarily in the nature of an improvement in the invention may be found desirable. Under the English Act a further patent may be obtained for an improvement, but the French code provides for certificates of alteration, improvements, and additions, being procurable, to have the same effect as the principal patents, with which they will expire. A still greater boon to the inventor are the auxiliary articles of the code, that none but the patentee or person interested through him can, during one year, obtain a patent for an alteration, improvement, or addition to an invention which forms the subject of the original patent. Any person wishing to obtain any such patent on the original discovery may make an application to remain deposited under seal during the year, but the original patentee has the preference for any alteration, improvement, or addition, for which he shall, during the year, have demanded a certificate. This law must be the means of preserving to many an inventor the full results of his invention.

Another serviceable provision is to be found in the Code Belgique, that if an original patentee declines to keep up the patent, a person obtaining a patent for an improvement thereon shall be at liberty to pay the renewal taxes, so as to keep up his own patent, although not entitled to use the original patent without a license. Under the clauses for enforcing compulsory licenses, as contained in the bill, a patentee would then be able to procure the full benefit of his patent for the improvement, and avail himself of the original patent virtually abandoned by the proprietor.

A very material requisite appears to have been disregarded in the English Act and the proposed bill, particularly needed in colonies like Australia—the means of exercising jurisdiction, or jurisdiction with facility, over proprietors of patents not resident in the country. The Canadian Act apparently meets the necessity by the provision that an applicant shall elect a domicile at some known and specified place in Canada, but there is, I believe, no provision in the Patent Act of any other country for the requirement. Very possible cases suggest themselves in which a local inventor may be placed under circumstances of extreme difficulty by reason of a foreign applicant, not within the jurisdiction of the Court, having improperly obtained a grant, which could be the subject of revocation under the improved mode of procedure on the old writ of scire facias contemplated by the bill. The remedy occurring to me is to provide that any person not resident in the colony obtaining a patent should be under the necessity of naming in his petition, or otherwise registering, a representative resident in the colony upon whom the service of any process for the revocation of a patent, or for procuring a compulsory license, should be effectual; that, in the event of the absence or death of the representative, any person interested might require the registrar to post a notice to the patentee at the address given in the petition, requiring the appointment of another representative within a limited period of time (not exceeding six months), varying with the distance of residence, and that in the absence of such appointment the person interested may proceed ex parte.

No provision is contained in the Act in aid of patentees deprived of the exclusive rights conferred by the secret infringement or use of the patented process or invention. This is provided for in the French code. The patentee may obtain an order (apparently in the nature of a search warrant) to proceed by the officers of the Court to have pointed out, with our without seizure, articles said to be infringements; and the order may contain, if necessary, the nomination of an expert to assist the officer in his description. This order may require security to be given if a seizure is required. A similar provision exists in Belgium, providing for an inventory of articles said to be infringed being made by an expert, and for an injunction to restrain the same being parted with.

To guard against the needless expenditure which may be incurred by persons innocently infringing a patented invention, it will be very desirable to adopt the American provision to require all patented articles to have the word "patented" thereon or affixed by label thereto, under the penalty of the patentee not being entitled to recover damages in default of the requirements.

Until the passing of the recent English Act the law of England was that a patent could not be obtained by executors or administrators. It is proposed by the bill, in accordance with the English Act, to alter the law in favour of the personal representatives of the deceased, who are to be entitled to apply for and obtain a patent for the invention. It may be very desirable that this extension should be of a wider character, and the section of the Canadian Act adopted, namely, that a patent may be granted to any person to whom the inventor has assigned or bequeathed the right to obtain the same, or in default of such assignment or bequest to the executors or administrators of the deceased inventor.

It is no doubt desirable that the inventor should, during his lifetime, be a party to the application; but a patent might be granted directly to an assignee upon the application of the inventor, so that the necessity of first obtaining a patent and afterwards assigning the same may be avoided. This would afford facilities which do not now exist in the purchase and assignment of an invention before grants are obtained.

I am, &c., ALFRED DE LISSA.

COLONIAL GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.

N. S. Wales Funded	100	—	Debentures, due 1902	106	—

This afternoon an adjourned meeting of the Nevada Silver-mining Company was held at the Exchange. There was a large attendance. Mr. W. L. Davis presided. It was resolved that an expert should be appointed to report on the mine and the quality of the ore procured from it, especially with a view to the proper mode of treatment. The late directors having refused to withdraw their resignations, Messrs. Nicoll, Bensusan, Prendergast, Seward, and Moxham were elected in their place. The resolution conveying censure on the late directors, negatived at the last meeting, was withdrawn by the proposer. The question of the raising of additional capital to carry on the mine was then considered, and various proposals made, but eventually the determination of a proposal to be submitted to an adjourned meeting of the shareholders was left with the directors and a special committee. The directors were empowered to select the expert to examine and report on the mine, in accordance with the resolution of the meeting. Mr. Sachs, who had visited the mine, and had promiscuously picked up specimens of average ore, and had them examined by Mr. Dixson, analytical chemist, said that the report showed that if there was not an ounce of silver to the ton, the ore was so rich in other metals, especially in lead and copper, as to be very valuable if properly worked.

The general meeting of the shareholders of the Australian Cobalt and Manganese Company, Limited, was held yesterday, Dr. W. E. Warren in the chair. The report and balance-sheet were adopted. Mr. W. A. Dixon, consulting chemist to the company, explained to the meeting what was being done at the works, and expressed his opinion that the undertaking was a sound one, and the shareholders might expect large profits, now the works were in good going order, and difficulties overcome. Messrs. J. Y. Mills and John Higgins were again elected as directors. A vote of thanks was cordially given to the chairman, directors, legal manager, consulting chemist, and those connected with the works.

In the Import markets to-day business was quiet, and the sales coming under notice disclosed little of special interest. The flour market is without change. At the auction sale of groceries to-day, beyond the quittance of a few small lines of low tea and a quantity of damaged goods of which the prices form no evidence of values of sound goods, there was very little business done. These was no competition for any of the lines of Queensland or river sugars, and they were all passed in for private sale. Privately, the day's business in grocery goods disclosed nothing of special interest. Respecting the hop market there is little to notice; quotations being without change. Under date September 15, Messrs. Baker, White, and Morgan, hop merchants, of London, state that about one-third of the crop of hops being gathered, they ventured with some confidence to estimate the entire growth with reference to quality and quantity. In both respects they regretted to report that they fell short of their expectations of a few weeks since, and if it were not for the more favourable reports from abroad they would not be justified, as they were, in expecting low prices to prevail this season. They estimated the 71,000 acres then under cultivation to produce about 450,000cwts. of hops, or an equivalent to £225,000 old duty. The quality would be very uneven, the recent gales having affected it, and also injured the colour; but they anticipated a moderate supply of fine hops from protected situations. The Continental crop had also, to some extent, been affected by unfavourable weather, but they looked forward to liberal importations from thence, as also from America and California. In liquors, business has become very slack. Metals also are dull of sale. In building materials, cement continues in active demand. The late scarcity is not likely to be long maintained, as the month's shipments advised were exceedingly heavy. At auction a line of Bangor slates, 20 x 10, 22 x 11, and 24 x 12, sold at £7 17s. 6d. At Messrs. Harris and Ackman's timber sale to-day there was a fair attendance of buyers. There demands were almost entirely confined to dressed kauri. For rough Oregon competition was slack. The following rates were realised:—Ex Conference: 6 x 1 T. and G. dressed kauri flooring at 16s. 8d.; 9 x 1 rough shelving at 12s. 9d., 12 x 1 at 15s., 14 x 1 at 14s. 9d., 16 x 1 at 15s. 3d.; 9-inch O. G. skirting at 14s. 8d.; 9-inch D. S. skirting at 16s., 12-inch at 16s. 3d.; 6-inch architraves at 10s.; 5-feet dressed pickets at 10s. 6d.; flitches at 14s.; and also 6 x 1 T. and G. Oregon flooring at 15s. 6d. and 16s.; sashes at 7s. 3d. to 11s.; Eastern doors at 11s. 6d. to 16s.; and the cargo of rough Oregon was cleared at 12s., privately.

Messrs. Fraser and Co. will offer at auction to-morrow (Wednesday) morning, Queensland and other sugars, Indian tea, surplus stores, &c.

Messrs. J. H. Geddes and Co. hold a sale of wool to-day. The catalogue, comprising 500 bales, was nearly all sold at prices considered by brokers to be fully commensurate with results of sales received to-day from London. Faulty greasy wools, which represent at present the bulk of the wools offered, showed the most serious decline, while fair lots of scoured were eagerly competed for. The principal lots sold were EMI in square, 6 bales at 7¼d.; JM'D over Yanco, 11 at 7d.; GO, 50 from 1d. to 6¼d.; Eumalga, 18 at 6¼d.; ES over I, 24 at 6d.; LB over T, 10 from 4¼d. to 6d.; GL over No. 2, 8 at 5d.; A, 11 bales scoured pieces at 9¾d.; A, 8 bales greasy wool at 7d.

There was a moderately good attendance of buyers at the leather sales to-day, but the demand was limited, and late prices were barely maintained. Messrs. F. L. Barker, John Bridge, Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Limited, and Hill, Clark, and Co. report sales as follows:—Kip, 13d. to 15d.; sole, 8d. to 10d.; damaged sole, from 6d.; shoulders, 6d. to 7¼d.; bellies, 6¾d.; tweed, 16d. to 27d.; calf, 23d. to 28d.; kangaroo, 33d.; yearling, 20½d.; harness, 11d. to 13d.; bridle, 6s. to 10s. 6d.; bag, 7s. to 11s.; basils, 6s. to 11s.

Messrs. Mort and Co., Limited, and John Bridge held sales of marsupial skins to-day. There was good competition. Large kangaroo skins sold to 60s.; small from 4s. Sales of butchers' green sheepskins were held by Messrs. R. Goldsbrough and Co., Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Limited, and Hill, Clark and Co. Best sold at 3s. to 3s. 4d., others from 2s.; lambskins, 7d. to 12d.; pelts, 4d. to 6d.

By the incoming mail we have London files to September 18. For the week there had been no change in the money market. The rate for best three months' bills was 1⅛ per cent.; day to day loans ¼ to ½ per cent. Colonial stocks were generally firm. Closing quotations for banks were:—Australasia, 94-96; English, Scottish, and Australian, 32½-33½; London Chartered of Australia, 21½-22½; National of Australasia, 9½-10½; New South Wales, 64-66; New Zealand, 26½-27½; Queensland National, 11½-11¾; Union of Australia, 70-72. Respecting the market for colonial securities, and especially of New South Wales 8½ per cents., Mr. W. Westgarth writes:—

"Under the continued influence of cheap money, prices are nominally maintained, and in the absence of transactions of any importance they show but few changes during the last four weeks. There is no change in Victoria April and October inscribed fours, in New South Wales inscribed fours, and in New Zealand Consolidated fours. The Victoria January-July fours, now at 103¾, have lost ¼ per cent. The South Australian April-October inscribed fours, after touching 102½, and the Queensland inscribed fours, after touching 102, a rise of ¼ per cent. in each case, have again lost that improvement, while the New South Wales three-and-a-half per cents. now at 92½ ex div., have declined five eighths per cent. This last named stock is exceptionally weak, and the price purely nominal, owing to the probable appearance of a new loan for five and a half millions early in October. This security, being obtainable at a discount, is naturally favoured by trustees as offering the means of increasing their trust capital for the benefit of those they represent, and a loan for a moderate amount—say a million—would find a ready market in that quarter; but on the other hand, the ordinary investor generally prefers the sound of four per cent., even at a comparatively higher price, and as the quantity of three-and-a-halfs still on the market is believed to be even larger than that of any of the later Colonial four per cent. issues, it may well be asked whether the result of a further issue at that rate is likely to prove satisfactory to the colony. The fact that Canada, after launching a three-and-a-half per cent. loan for five millions with fair success, reverted to the four per cent. rate on the last occasion, is well worthy of attention."

The shipments to the colonies were valued at £2,268,800, against £2,218,600 in the previous month, and £1,761,300 in the corresponding month of last year. Compared with the figures in the previous months in the various colonies, the total in New South Wales, £840,500, showed an increase of £84,400; to Queensland £256,000, an increase of £79,000; to Melbourne £520,400, a decrease of £180,100; to Adelaide £281,200, an increase of £18,600; to Swan River £33,100, an increase of £16,700; to Tasmania £51,200, an increase of £3200, there being a decrease on the New Zealand shipments. The total shipments for the first 36 weeks of the year amounted to £19,132,700, against £17,263,700 in the corresponding date of last year. The month's shipments to Sydney included: Drapery, £305,300; leather and saddlery, £45,970; rails and machinery, £114,200; books, paper, and stationery, £37,223; gunpowder, 2294cwt.; hardware, £40,600; pig iron, 773 tons; galvanised iron, 1651 tons; sheet lead, 147 tons; tin plates, 3150 boxes; wire and wire rope, 374 tons; linseed oil, 28,800 gallons; cement, 30,020 barrels; tobacco, 51,270lb.; brandy, in bulk, 14,790 gallons—in case, 19,320 gallons; rum, 16,490 gallons; geneva, 1580 gallons; British spirits, in bulk, 20,160 gallons—in case, 5430 gallons; red wine, 7560 gallons; white wine, 4930 gallons; beer, bulk, 406 barrels of 36 gallons—glass, 2120 barrels of 36 gallons; malt, 2146qr.; hops, 346cwt.; sardines, £1230; assorted oilmen's stores, £13,740; white salt, 423 tons—rock, 200 tons; British candles, 786cwt.; raisins, 388cwt.; currants, 248cwt.; treacle, 456cwt.

The barque Dumbartonshire, from Antwerp, with a general cargo; and the Suez (s.), from Hongkong and Foochow, with tea and Eastern produce, arrived to-day.

Messrs. F. W. Heilgers and Co. write from Calcutta, under date 29th September, 1885:—

"Jute Goods.—The following minimum prices for September-October delivery were fixed at the manufacturers' weekly meeting held on 23rd instant:—10-shot cornsacks, at 19r. 12a.; 9-shot ditto, at 19r. 8a.; 10¼lb. woolpacks, at 11a. 6p.; 11¼lb. ditto, at 12a.; branbags, at 14r.; N. Z. sacks, at 20r. 8a. The sales for the fortnight comprise 3000 bales 11¼lb. woolpacks, at 11a. 9p. and 12a.; 400 bales 9-shot cornsacks, at 19r. and 19r. 4a., and a retail lot of New Zealand sacks at 28r. 8a. f.o.b., all for near shipment. Prices have gradually hardened, and during the past few days a good business has been in progress, chiefly for local consumption, and the country trade for September-October delivery, and speculators have also entered the market for November and January. Sellers being well occupied for October, a further advance in the minimum rates is not unlikely to be established at the next meeting to be held to-morrow. Castor oil: There has been some inquiry during the past fortnight for both the home and Australian markets, and sales of No. 3 quality at from 7r. 4a. to 8r. Castor seed remains firm, as two steamers are loading on the Madras coast for Marseilles, and this fact naturally tends to harden our oil market, and some of the large crushers are asking as much as 8r. 4a. for No. 3 oil for forward delivery, say December-January next. Shipments to Australia up to the present time have been much below those of former years, and it is considered not unlikely that an active inquiry may soon spring up from your side, in which case we should doubtless see considerably higher rates here. Rice: Our market is quiet. Some business has been done for the Cape in TR quality, and the price of No. 2 Ballam has receded to the rate given below. We quote best Patna (No. 1 secta), £11 1s. 3d. f.o.b., nominal; No. 2 Ballam, £9 13s. 9d. f.o.b. Freights: We quote—London, steamer, 30s. to 35s.; London, sail, 27s. 6d.; Australia, steamer, 35s. to 40s.; Australia, sail, 35s. Exchange: 1s. 6 9-16d to 1s. 6¾d., six months' credits."

From to-day's Government Gazette we copy the following general abstracts, showing the average amount of the liabilities and assets of the banks named, within the colony of New South Wales, taken from the several weekly statements during the quarter from the 1st July to 30th September, 1885:—

vention," as Sir HENRY PARKES's statement was described by Mr. DALLEY, was deemed unworthy of more than a passing notice: and in this he was right, for there is hardly a publicist in Australia familiar with all the circumstances who would assert that the Government are illegally in office. It is a remarkable fact that scarcely one of the Opposition leaders has included in his bill of indictment against the Government what Sir HENRY PARKES has alleged against them, and which he declares is one of the gravest offences that an Administration can commit. From the prominence which they gave to such charges as those which had reference to Standard paint and barbed wire, it may be inferred that if they had believed there was anything in Sir HENRY PARKES's constitutional invention they would have denounced it in their addresses to their constituents. The fact is, some of the leading Oppositionists ridicule what Sir HENRY PARKES professes to believe to be a crime so heinous that political burglary is the only phrase that accurately describes it. To that constitutional question, therefore, Mr. DALLEY would not, because of its manifest absurdity, devote any time. But he showed very clearly that in going to St. Leonards to oppose Mr. DIBBS Sir HENRY PARKES committed an act which is without a precedent in the history of English politics. He asserted that in England the issues involved in a general election were, so far as the leading performers were concerned, left to be determined by the Parliament, and he could not call to mind a single instance of a political leader in that country running away from his own constituency to fight a leader of the opposite party in his electorate. If that be true, it follows that, even if Sir HENRY PARKES's allegation be true that the PREMIER has outraged the Constitution by the manner in which he reconstructed the Government, in going to St. Leonards to oppose Mr. DIBBS, Sir HENRY has committed an offence as grave as that of which he accuses his opponent The practice of English statesmen condemns him; and it is to that, more than to written law, that he constantly appeals.

The strongest part of Mr. DALLEY's speech was that in which he stated what, in his judgment, was the real issue before the country. The issue of the St. Leonards election, he declared, was the bridge which was intended to marry that suburb to the city. None who read Sir HENRY PARKES' speeches to the electors, and especially his parody on one of Lord MACAULAY'S best poems, can doubt that he himself regarded the bridge as the strongest card in his hand; nor can it be doubted that if he had kept the bridge out of sight, and adhered closely to his constitutional invention, he would not have got a place on the poll. Mr. DALLEY therefore did not misrepresent the matter when he said that the issue at the St. Leonards election was the bridge. But the issue now before the country is more important than that. In Mr. DALLEY's vigorous words, it is whether we are to fight out political battles with bright weapons of reason and wit, or with the bludgeons of slander. To a large extent that is the issue, and it should be decided one way or the other. We cannot conceal the fact that from the period when the last session of the late Parliament began until the present, political controversy has been conducted in a manner that is calculated to bring the country into disgrace. Never since responsible government was introduced has there been so much slander and vituperation in an electioneering contest as we have had in the contest now proceeding. There is no difficulty in fixing upon the persons who are mainly responsible for commencing and stimulating this gross outrage upon the fair fame of the colony; but what the electors are now to do is to say with no uncertain voice whether political warfare is to be conducted in this manner. Especially is it the duty of the importers of the Murrumbidgee to give a decision. As soon as Mr. DIBBS was defeated at St. Leonards the former electorate sent a requisition to him, and if it returns him as one of its members it will declare its disapproval of the tactics which brought about the PREMIER'S defeat at St. Leonards, and offer a partial atonement to the country for what it has suffered by those proceedings.

In returning thanks for the sympathetic feeling shown towards him, Mr. DIBBS could not enter largely into the question of the future policy of the Government. But he declared very plainly that he intended to meet the House, and would not surrender the reins of power until compelled to do so by an adverse vote. It suits the Opposition to say that the country has declared against the Government, and that therefore they ought to resign before the House assembles for the transaction of business. But the country cannot yet be said to have done anything of the kind. It is true that many of the newly-elected members have expressed decided hostility to the Administration, but by far the greater number, if they have not announced themselves as supporters of the Administration, have taken a neutral position. In the peculiar circumstances of the case, the latter have, perhaps, acted wisely. But it may appear that they are not opposed to the Government, and when they discover that the Government has a full programme of business of an important nature to engage the attention of the Assembly, and that the leaders of the Opposition have not even the shadow of a policy, they may hesitate to dethrone Mr. DIBBS, and to set up Sir HENRY PARKES in his place.

The company who assembled to do honour to the COLONIAL TREASURER were naturally cheered at the news of the return of the COLONIAL SECRETARY. Sir PATRICK JENNINGS, it appears, has, so far as is known, beaten his opponent by a majority of something like fifty. That majority is not a large one, but it is sufficient for the purposes of the Government. Another defeat or two would have destroyed their hopes. They were hardly in a position to suffer further disaster; and on other than Ministerial grounds it is well that Sir PATRICK has not been dismissed by his old constituents. His opponent may be qualified to serve the country, but he can afford to wait. Now that the elections are drawing to a close, Ministers are turning their attention to the question of the filling up of vacancies. Rumour has it that the question has already been considered, and that the task is found to be attended with some little difficulty. There are always men who are willing to enter the ranks of a Ministry, but the men who are readiest to take office are not always the men who are the fittest for office. The new men that the Ministry want are the men who will add to their strength and influence; but in existing circumstances these are the men that they will find it hard to get.

We reported in yesterday's Herald that the MINISTER FOR LANDS had, in the case of a conditional purchase which his predecessor had declared void two years ago, reconsidered the decision, and reversed it. The action taken by Mr. ABBOTT is of importance, because it is not only a reversal of Mr. FARNELL'S decision, but contrary to the view and practice of the Department for a long time past. The question of interest, however, is whether it is or is not in accordance with the law. Mr. ABBOTT may overrule Mr. FARNELL'S decision; but Mr. ABBOTT, like Mr. FARNELL, can act upon his own view of the law, and the authoritative interpretation of the law must come from the Supreme Court. Neither the decisions of a Minister nor the practice of the Department can determine what the law is; they may both be upset by a Supreme Court judgment.

In this case, however, Mr. ABBOTT is not acting upon his own unsupported view of the law. His decision is really founded upon a ruling of the Supreme Court. The conditional purchase in question adjoined an area of land that had been reserved from sale for the preservation of water supply before the selection was taken up. But not only had the land been reserved from sale; it had been highly improved by the lessees of the run, who had constructed a tank upon it. The reserve appears to have been a small one, and the value of the improvements was such that, in the words of the SURVEYOR-GENERAL, who wrote a minute on the application, the value "would cover an area considerably over the boundaries of the reserve on both sides, taking the improvements as the centre of the area so protected." The conditional purchase came within this overlapping area; and, on the assumption that the latter was exempted from selection by the improvements on the reserve, the former was declared void.

In dealing with the area, Mr. ABBOTT points out that the Act of 1880 prohibited the Crown tenant from acquiring any right to purchase land by virtue of improvements made upon reserves. The question here, however, was not whether the lessee could purchase, but whether the improvements barred conditional purchase outside the reserve. Improvements of a certain value barred conditional purchase over a certain area of surrounding land, where there was no reserve. Would they, then, have a like effect if they were made on a reserve the area of which was less than the area that would be protected by them in the other case. Mr. ABBOTT holds that they would not. His reason is, that improvements that bar selection must be improvements on Crown lands, and lands reserved for the preservation of water supply are not Crown lands. Improvements constructed on lands that are not Crown lands have not, in his view, any more effect in exempting adjacent Crown lands from selection than they would if they were on a freehold.

We do not think that this last proposition will be disputed; but perhaps some may be ready to challenge the assertion that lands temporarily reserved from sale by the Crown are not Crown lands. We should be disposed to do so were there not an authoritative opinion upon this question. Crown lands are defined in the Act of 1861 to be "lands which have not been dedicated to a public purpose." "But," says Mr. ABBOTT, "this water reserve was dedicated to a public purpose under section 5 of the Act of 1861." This is not strictly accurate, for, on turning to the Gazette of October 3, 1874, when the reservation was notified, we find that the notice was expressly given under section 4. Now, while section 5 does authorise the Government to "reserve or dedicate" Crown lands for the preservation of water supply, and other public purposes, section 4 gives power under which lands may be "reserved from sale until surveyed for the preservation of water supply or other public purpose." The difference between the two sections appears on the surface to be that, whilst section 5 provides for permanent reservations, section 4 provides for temporary reservations only. Then comes section 6, which provides that lands which shall be "permanently reserved" for the purposes specified shall be "deemed to be dedicated." This would seem to imply that lands which had been temporarily reserved should not be deemed to be dedicated, in which case they would not cease to be Crown lands.

So far, the reasoning seems to be against Mr. ABBOTT. But, in the case RICKETSON v. BARBOUR, as is stated in Mr. J. L. WATKINS's handy little book on the Crown Lands Acts, "the question was raised whether lands reserved from sale under the 4th section of this Act—for the preservation of timber—were lands 'dedicated to any public purpose' within the meaning of this definition. The majority of the Court (Sir JAMES MARTIN, C.J., and HARGRAVE, J.), held that such lands were within the exception, and were therefore not 'Crown lands,' as defined by the first section. FAUCETT, J., however, held that absolute and permanent dedication only was meant, and that, accordingly, lands temporarily reserved from sale, no matter for what purpose, remain Crown lands." Mr. WATKINS adds that "the ruling of the majority of the Judges on this point in RICKETSON v. BARBOUR was treated as binding on the Court in the case of ATKINSON v. BARLING." And, as it has been held binding on the Court, it must be binding on the MINISTER, unless it be reversed on appeal by the Privy Council. However anomalous, therefore, it may appear to be that a temporary reservation, which may be revoked at any time by the Executive, should have in this matter effect equivalent to that of a dedication which is set aside by Act of Parliament, the decision must be accepted. This decision shows the advantage of having a lawyer at the head of the Lands Department, and will be widely welcomed on its merits, because it is on the popular side.

The debate in the Legislative Assembly of Victoria on the Bill for adopting the Federal Enabling Bill was the best that has taken place in that Assembly, or indeed in any Assembly, on this subject, because more points were taken and submitted for discussion. The misfortune is that all the time and labour were wasted, because whenever a defect was pointed out, or an amendment suggested, the invariable answer was that it was too late; that the measure was now an Imperial one, and all that remained to the colonies was to accept or reject it. But whose fault is it that it is now too late to amend this new Constitution? The Legislative Assembly of Victoria is perhaps more responsible than any other body for the unwise, and we may add unconstitutional, course that was taken of forcing the bill through under cover of a resolution that allowed of no amendment. Some of the suggestions that have now been made seem to be dawning on hon. members for the first time; others had been previously thought of, but were hushed up for fear of doing mischief. Mr. PEARSON remarked that when the Enabling Bill was before the House certain amendments were proposed by an hon. member which would have guided the English lawyers as to the feeling of the community, but he was urged not to press them, and so to secure unanimity in the passing of the measure they were sacrificed. This is to confess that the unanimity was illusory, and not real, and that there never has been, and is not now, such a general consensus of opinion on the subject as the passing of the measure without a division has been held to imply. This looking off of discussion in that way, even as respects minor matters, but as respects an act for framing a new Constitution for the whole of the colonies it was certainly unwise, for no Act better deserved a most thorough examination.

Mr. BENT, indeed, goes so far as to say that the alleged enthusiasm in Victoria for the measure is all a delusion, and that he is confident that if the bill was submitted to the country it would never be consented to. Mr. MIRAMS takes a similar view. He says: "The fact was that there was no feeling in the community in favour of the bill. Federation was a grand phrase to conjure with, a fine word to hurl at a public meeting, especially of young men who were born in the colonies; but he ventured to say that if they took a walk down Collins-street, and questioned twenty men severally about what they meant by the word and how far this bill would secure it, not one out of the twenty would be able to give an intelligent answer." Whether he is right or wrong in this estimate of public opinion we cannot undertake to say, but undoubtedly the discussion of so great a question should have sprung from the people, or at any rate have passed through the people. As it is, the whole thing has been done over the heads of the people.

Sir CHARLES MACMAHON pointed out that we were "in danger of bringing about some such collision as that which occurred in America in binding the States to certain things of which they could not afterwards rid themselves. Were not hon. members about to give away the rights of the people? Did not the bill now before the House involve an alteration of our Constitution? If the measure would have the effect of repealing any bill which this Legislature might pass, the SPEAKER would be bound to say that it was a material alteration of the Constitution, and must be dealt with accordingly." It is rather late in the day to raise the objection, but at the same time it is the first opportunity that has been offered of taking the SPEAKER'S opinion on the question raised, because it is the first time that the federation question has come before Parliament in the form of a bill, and even now it is only a bill for saying "aye" or "no" to another bill.

Mr. MIRAMS raised a point which we have not seen noticed before, namely, that colonies remitting questions for settlement might find themselves in the awkward predicament of having those questions settled against their own inclination and interest. This might certainly happen. Any two colonies can remit a question, but there will be six colonies to vote, and the four can easily outvote the two. The possibility of such a thing happening will tend to make any colonies chary of remitting a question unless they have practically assured themselves beforehand of what the decision is likely to be.

The Assembly passed the second reading of the adopting bill without a division, and yet it stands confessed that nobody quite knows what the bill means or how it will work out. Mr. PEARSON said "the Act was from first to last deceptive and monstrous, and there was so much uncertainty about it that there was no telling what power it conferred." The uncertainty is undoubtedly great. Mr. KERFERD, the Attorney-General, is of opinion that no such question as the tariff can be remitted to the Council. He said: "This principle is laid down as the foundation of the fabric that we are going to create; that whatever may happen, none of the colonies shall be interfered with in the slightest degree in their own territorial limits. This Council is to legislate beyond territorial limits." That is to say that the Federal Council is to have a foreign policy but no domestic policy. That view might prevail if the authority of the Council were limited expressly to extra-territorial matters, but sub-section 1 of the fifteenth clause gives power to deal with defences, quarantine, patents, copyright, weights, measures, marriage, divorce, naturalisation, joint-stock companies, "and any other matter of general Australasian interest, with respect to which the Legislatures of the several colonies can legislate within their own limits." If "within their own limits" does not mean inter-territorial, then there is no fixed meaning in words.

There was naturally much discussion as to the question of representation by population. The defence of the present arrangement is that it was a good-natured concession to the smaller colonies, but it has the serious defect that a minority may govern a majority, and there are already indications of some fear that Victoria may be out-voted by a combination of the smaller colonies. As matters stand at present, there will only be ten members in the Council, and Victoria will be represented by two. In a full House Victoria might easily be outvoted, and as a bare majority will constitute a quorum, a victory against that colony might be snatched in a thin House. It will require incessant vigilance to see that this does not happen. Mr. SERVICE indeed said, "We can never be outvoted in matters of policy; only in the framing of bills," but he did not make it clear in what this protection consisted.

The report of the deputation which, in the interests of the Kenny Hill water supply scheme, waited upon Mr. BADGERY on Monday, shows clearly that the further the effort to upset the present works is pushed the more unsatisfactory does the probable result appear. Sir JOHN COODE declines to undertake the examination of the rival schemes with a view to report upon them, because he has not sufficient time, and he recommends that if a competent opinion upon the question be required, it should in a certain manner be submitted to a specialist in London, who would be able to give a decision which should be regarded as final. If there were any certainty that the decision so given would be regarded as final there might be some reason for adopting Sir JOHN COODE'S suggestion; but as it is impossible to think that the decision could be satisfactory to all parties, the proposal only plunges the question into greater difficulty. Apart from the important circumstances of expense and delay, the decision of Mr. HAWKSLEY or Mr. BATEMAN could not in any degree satisfy both sides, and it is plain that the disappointed party would still agitate as strongly as ever for the adoption of its views. This is shown forcibly by the fact that Mr. GIPPS, apparently dissatisfied at the proposed reference of the question to one engineer, urged that it should be submitted to three engineers. The ACTING MINISTER FOR WORKS very properly declined to countenance such a proceeding; but what is to prevent the advocates of the Kenny Hill scheme urging the same proposal if, when the report of the one engineer is received, it is found to be opposed to their views? And if Mr. HAWKSLEY or Mr. BATEMAN'S report should be in favour of the Kenny Hill scheme, and against that upon which we have expended so much time, money, and anxious thought, is it at all probable that the Government would take a course which would be like striking off this enormous expenditure as so much dead loss, without further inquiry to ascertain how it was that one engineer should be of an opinion quite opposed to that of another engineer of equal eminence, and who not only had the plans and papers before him, but had what it is not proposed Mr. HAWKSLEY or Mr. BATEMAN should have—the advantage of a personal examination of the ground on which it was at the time proposed the water should be brought to Sydney? As we have on previous occasions said, this proposed reference of the water supply question to another engineer means simply great additional expense, unjustifiable delay in completing the works, and an indecision in dealing with a matter of great public importance which is detrimental to progress, and injurious to the best interests of the country.

We are now getting a new story from London brokers as to the estimation in which English capitalists hold our 3½ per cent. stock. We have from the first maintained that since the issue of our first loan at 3½ per cent. there has been nothing in the condition of the London market to show that this stock was appreciated so well as that issued at 4 per cent. It was said that it was generally preferred by trustees; but according to a communication from Mr. WESTGARTH in our commercial columns, the demand by trustees is limited, and only a loan for a million would find a ready market. But from this well-known broker we now get the admission—and it is the first time we have seen it made in England—that the ordinary investor generally prefers the sound of 4 per cent. even at a comparatively higher price; and he goes on to observe:—"As the quantity of three and a halfs still in the market is believed to be even larger than that of any of the later colonial four per cent. issues, it may well be asked whether the result of a further issue at that rate is likely to prove satisfactory to the colony." The position Mr. WESTGARTH takes up is very different from that which was held by London brokers at the outset. Nothing was said about the limited number of persons who were prepared to buy at a discount, the statement being that the desire was general to purchase them in that way. But experience has shown that it was a mistake to float a loan at 3½ per cent.,—both by the low price ruling for it, and by the fact that people were more freely buying 4 per cent. stock, our own at an advance of from £3 to £4 per cent. And when Mr. WESTGARTH observed, "It may well be asked whether the result of a further issue at that rate is likely to prove satisfactory to the colony," he only expressed the views which have been held here, and the correctness of which had further confirmation on the floating of the last loan, a week or two after he wrote. When Canada found her 3½ per cent. loan not quite so successful as an issue at 4 per cent., the latter rate was reverted to. And in the light of the facts now stated by Mr. WESTGARTH, and which in Australia were sufficiently clear without that statement, it is to be regretted that New South Wales did not follow the example of Canada. The unsold balance of 3½ per cents. might have been left for trustees anxious for the stock; and we might have hoped to get £104 or £105 for an issue at 4 per cent., seeing that our 4 per cent. stock was then quoted at over £107.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

FROM the cable message published elsewhere it will be seen that Lord Carrington, the Governor-elect of New South Wales, left London yesterday for the Continent, en route for Sydney. He will go on board the R.M.S. Carthage at Brindisi, which leaves that port on Monday next. Lady Carrington and her sister are also passengers by the Carthage.

THE English mail per P. and O. steamer Ballarat was delivered in Sydney yesterday morning at 9 o'clock. The letters of our London and Paris correspondents to September 18 will be found elsewhere. The former gives the position of affairs in connection with the Carolines dispute at that date. Our Paris correspondent deals principally with the probability of the Tonking question being again opened up by the installation of a new King of Annam, and the attitude of the Anglophobist press of France on the proposal made by the British Government to mediate between Germany and Spain in the Caroline Islands difficulty.

A LARGELY attended and very enthusiastic and successful banquet was given in the Masonic Hall, St. Leonards, last night, to the Hon. G. R. Dibbs (Premier and Colonial Treasurer) by his friends and supporters in the Electorate. About 180 gentlemen were present, and as the hall had been very tastefully decorated with flags, and the platform so as to produce the best effect, the general appearance of the banqueting room was very striking. The chair was filled by Mr. W. B. Dalley, and with the exception of the Attorney-General, the whole of the Ministers attended. The speeches, which are briefly reported elsewhere, were interesting, and evoked much applause, but they contained no feature of Government policy not already made public. Mr. [illegible] of the members for St. Leonards, expressed the opinion that were the election for St. Leonards again to take place Mr. Dibbs would be returned at the head of the poll.

CONTRARY to expectation, the names of the new Ministers who are to fill the vacancies in the Government were not made known yesterday, but last night we were informed that no appointments had up to that time been made. It was stated on Monday that Mr. Copeland had been offered and had declined the office of Minister for Works.

UNDER the Crown Lands Act of 1861, population areas were set apart for the use of the inhabitants in the different townships throughout the colony, and these population areas have, from time to time, been of very considerable advantage to the public. But owing to errors which crept into the census of 1881, by reason of the population of districts being returned as the population of townships, population areas were attached to places where in many instances there were but very few inhabitants. In the Act of 1884, however, power is given to remedy this wholesale setting apart of land for people who do not exist, which has resulted in the land falling into the hands of adjacent pastoral tenants; and steps are now being taken to revoke these areas where they are found to be unnecessary, and to throw them open to settlement. The particulars of some cases were before the Executive Council yesterday, and we believe a proclamation revoking certain of the areas will shortly appear in a supplement to the Government Gazette.

THE Telegraph Department received advices from Eucla at 1.25 p.m. (W. A. time) yesterday, to the effect that telegraphic communication had been restored on the Western Australian line.

THE mercantile community of Sydney seems at length to have been aroused to the necessity of taking decided steps towards securing the continuance of the San Francisco mail service intact, instead of adopting the scheme of transhipment at Honolulu, and a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce has been called for Friday next, to consider the matter. A meeting of importers of American goods—independent of the Chamber of Commerce—has also been arranged for at the Exchange on Friday next, at noon, with the object of adopting a memorial and petition to the Postmaster-General to the following effect:—"1. That the proposed mail contract to America (involving a transhipment at Honolulu) is most injurious to the interests of the mercantile and general public in this colony. 2. That such interests imperatively demand that a direct and uninterrupted service from Sydney to San Francisco should be arranged for."

THE trustees of the Art Gallery of New South Wales have under offer to them four oil paintings, which are now on view at the gallery; and it is probable that at least one of them will be added to our national collection. The pictures are examples of different schools, and each in its way repays careful study. "Une Grande Dame," by Mr. J. E. Millais, R.A., is the three-quarter length portrait of a pretty little girl, who carries a lovebird on her wrist. The child is dressed in a robe of rich brocade; and its tints, the rose flush in her cheeks, and the brilliant plumage of the parroquet are thrown into bright relief against a neutral-coloured background. Possessing, as we do, "The Captive," few people will wish to add "Une Grande Dame" to our gallery; for the work in it is not the perfection of Mr. Millais' style, and the face of the girl is utterly inexpressive. Another picture which does not tell at a glance the story indicated by its title is "Disinherited." Mr. Lasiett J. Pott, the artist, shows us a young man of troubled countenance descending a staircase, at the top of which stands an enraged old gentleman, whom a very pretty girl is endeavouring to restrain from an outburst of wrath. Two servants on the stairs are bowing to the young man, who presumably is the disinherited person. The figures are well drawn, the colouring is thoroughly harmonious, and the composition will bear careful analysis. Mr. B. W. Leader, A.R.A., is represented by a charming reproduction of a "Worcestershire Riverside Hamlet," in which a sunset effect of rosy cloud reflected in limpid water and fading light, enriching the warm tones of red brick cottages, has been faithfully given. Last, and perhaps most attractive of all, is Mr. Julian Dussel's "Haytime in Normandy," a lovely picture, which can be looked at over and over again, and always reveal new beauties. There is a lot of palette-knife work in it, but independently of this the treatment is broad in style, and the figure of the girl in the foreground, a comely lass turning the swathes of hay, is full of grace and animation. The work in this picture is admirable, and it would be a pity if it were allowed to leave Sydney.

It is likely that the new Art Gallery—that is to say the somewhat unattractive structure in the Domain, which will form the nucleus of our Art Gallery—will be finished in about a fortnight. The insurance on the present building and its contents will shortly expire, and so, as soon as possible, our national art treasures will be transferred to what will be their permanent home. The formal opening of the new gallery is to be made the occasion of an imposing ceremony.

THE conclusion of the Telegraph Conference at Berlin (writes our London correspondent on September 18) has not been satisfactory to Australia. The clever move by which Mr. Floyer, on behalf of the Egyptian Government, extracted from the Eastern Telegraph Company the payment of transit dues, which hitherto had been sternly denied, has had the effect of depriving the Australian public of the reduction of 2s. 6d. per word which had been promised, as was thought, beyond the reach of recall. Mr. Floyer's threat that Egypt would enter the European telegraph régime, and thereby deprive the Eastern Telegraph Company of some sixty or seventy thousand pounds of annual revenue, left Mr. Pender, on behalf the company, no alternative but to agree to Mr. Floyer's demand that the Eastern Company should pay transit dues to Egypt for messages transmitted over her territory. This means a loss to the Eastern Company, and a gain to Egypt, of £7,000 a year. The company have, therefore, sought to recoup themselves for the damage thus inflicted upon them by withholding their share of the proposed reduction on messages to Australia, giving as their reason for so doing the fact that the Indian Government would not consent to a reduction of 2½d. on their transit charges. That is to say, the Eastern Telegraph Company refused to grant a large concession because they were not able to wring a small one out of India, which only gets 7½d. out of the 10s. 9d. which is charged for a message from England to Australia. This, of course, is a very shallow excuse, and Messrs. Cracknell and Todd naturally feel that they have been very unjustly treated, inasmuch as the promise of a reduction was so distinctly made. The reduction in the rate of press messages, however, still continues, and, if there be no opposition on the part of Great Britain, will take effect in January next. The other decisions of the conference will not come into force until next July. After a magnificent banquet to the delegates given by Herr Von Stephan, Postmaster-General for Germany, at which the latter was presented with a splendid gold-mounted claret jug and several epergnes, in recognition of his generous hospitality, the conference was adjourned until 1890, when it will meet again in Paris. Previous to its separation Sir James Anderson sketched out a scheme to Herr Von Stephan, under which the nations of the world were to take over the cables of all the submarine cable companies, and guarantee the latter a fixed dividend on their capital. This is an astute suggestion, which causes a good deal of amusement. It would be so much better for the telegraph companies than for the nations of the world, that, in spite of Herr Von Stephan's appreciation, the latter are not likely to close with Sir James Anderson's idea.

AT the meeting of the British Association at Aberdeen on the 14th September (our London correspondent writes), Mr. J. G. Bartholomew's paper in the Geographical Section, upon the result of the recent explorations in North-west Australia was, in his absence, read by the secretary of the section. Mr. Bartholomew predicted a brilliant future for Western Australia, describing that colony as having almost unlimited possibilities, although at present in a backward state as compared with the other Australian colonies. Mr. J. S. O'Halloran concurred in this view, and declared that Mr. Bartholomew had performed a national service in calling attention to the importance of colonial geography. On the following day, Mr. Coutts Trotter read a paper on "Recent Explorations in New Guinea." A short discussion took place upon the action of the English Government in allowing a portion of New Guinea to fall into the hands of a foreign Power.

IN reference to the statement that it is desirable that the cement used in street formations in connection with the laying of wooden blocks should be of the best kind, the City Surveyor states that tests of the cements required by the Municipal Council are conducted in his office on the best known principles. The cements are tested according to their specific gravity, their weight, density, setting properties, colour, and tensile strength, and every precaution is taken to ascertain their purity, and the means used for the purpose are practically similar to those approved of by the Harbours and Rivers Department and the London Board of Works. Cements that do not satisfy these tests are not approved of, and, as a matter of fact, a large number of casks have been rejected in consequence of their being considered of an inferior character.

SOME time since the Sydney Municipal Council appointed Mr. C. Blackett to ascertain whether certain extras in connection with the Centennial Hall were in accordance with the bill sent in for them, which was for between £4000 and £5000, and which seemingly took the council by surprise because they had no remembrance of the extras having been authorised. Mr. Sapsford, the City Architect, was also desired to explain the matter, and that gentleman's reply and Mr. Blackett's report have been prepared and will be laid before the aldermen at an early date.

A DEPUTATION of builders and contractors intend waiting upon the Mayor to-day to obtain additional particulars with regard to the tenders for the Centennial Hall. It will be remembered that the council resolved that tenders should be invited for a building to be composed wholly of stone, and one composed of stone and brick and cement. The desire of the deputation is to ascertain whether a guarantee cannot be given as to the quantities in each instance.

A GOOD day's work was done in the Supreme Court yesterday. Chamber business began punctually at 9.30 a.m., before Mr. Justice Windeyer, and a great many cases were disposed of which had been standing over on account of the vacation. They were cases of no public importance. A number of divorce matters were also dealt with by Mr. Justice Windeyer in Chambers. His Honor, as soon as that business was over, took his seat with the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Faucett in Banco. In Wilson and another v. Dibbs a rule nisi for a new trial was, after considerable hesitation, granted. In Troy v. Balmain Steam Ferry Company, cross rules were granted; and in Griffiths v. Durack a rule was refused. The case of Anderson v. Spofforth, an appeal from a conviction for gambling in a house known as the Chester Club, was part heard when the Court rose at 4.15 p.m.

YESTERDAY, before Mr. Justice Windeyer, seven divorce cases were dealt with. In the case of Jones v. Jones, a petition for judicial separation, the cause was fixed to be tried before the Judge without a jury on November 10. In the matter of O'Hara v. O'Hara, a petition for divorce, the case was set down for trial, before a Judge alone, on November 10. In the case of Wilkie v. Wilkie, a suit for dissolution of marriage by husband against wife, a further name was added as additional co-respondent. In the case of Black v. Black and Malthus, the date of trial before the Judge alone was fixed for November 13. In the case of Ladd v. Ladd, petition by wife against husband for divorce, the date of trial before the Judge alone was fixed for November 10.

THE announcement which we publish in this morning's cable news of the death of Mr. Christopher Newton, senior member of the firm of Christopher Newton and Co., of Sydney, importers of soft goods, will be received with deep regret, not only in mercantile circles, but among those who had the privilege of knowing the deceased gentleman in private life. The firm of Christopher Newton, whose business connection with this city extended considerably beyond a quarter of a century, will always be preserved, mainly in consequence of the rectitude of his character and his honourable conduct in connection with a grave crisis through which he safely passed, now some 18 years ago. Over 30 years since Mr. Newton opened a retail drapery business in Pitt-street, opposite the present premises of Farmer and Company, the establishment being known as the Beehive, and the style of the firm Newton Brothers, Mr. Thomas Newton having joined the business three or four years after it was opened. About seven or eight years later the last-named gentleman died, and shortly afterwards the surviving partner enlarged his operations, and started in the wholesale soft goods trade in premises the site of which is now occupied by Farmer and Company. Mr. Newton subsequently removed to a building adjoining the Royal Hotel, in George-street (now Campbell's furniture warehouse), and it was there—in 1867—that he became involved in difficulties, and was compelled to suspend payment. The circumstances of the failure are sufficiently well remembered to render it unnecessary to enter into details, but it may be mentioned that for a considerable time Mr. Newton was mentally and physically prostrated by the blow. After the assets of the estate had been realised, it was found that a sum of £150,000 remained unliquidated; and this amount Mr. Newton agreed to pay in full upon an extension of time for 21 months. Before that period had elapsed, however, he found it necessary to effect a compromise, and paid 15s. in the £. The deceased gentleman then proceeded to England, and in 1871 he returned to Sydney and obtained the lease of the company's present place of business in Pitt-street. The operations of the firm, which, since the disaster of 1867, had been successfully continued, gradually developed, and been steps to clear off the balance of the old liability, amounting to about £50,000, and according, in the beginning of 1881 he again visited England and paid the sum mentioned, thus removing the onus of what he had always considered an outstanding obligation, notwithstanding the fact of his creditors having accepted a composition. He returned to Sydney soon afterwards, and left the colony—finally as it turned out—for England in November, 1884, and to the time of his death was in the sixty-fifth year of his age. Mr. Newton was considered a shrewd man of business, and he secured the esteem as well as the confidential loyalty of his employés by his kindly disposition and the consideration with which he recognised their services. Socially, he was very unassuming and retiring, being thoroughly opposed to anything which might bring his name into public prominence; but as a host he was invariably genial and hearty. The firm of Christopher Newton and Co. is now carried on by Messrs. John Newton, Christopher Newton, Sydney N. Hawkes, and William Newton (sons of the deceased gentleman), and Mr. J. E. O. Daly.

WE regret to announce the death of Mrs. Maurice Alexander, the wife of the late Mr. Maurice Alexander, an old and well-known resident of this city. The deceased lady's name will be known to the general public in connection with her munificent gifts to public educational establishments; but apart from these, and unseen by the public eye, were many acts of private and unostentatious charity which will keep her memory green for many a year to come. Mrs. Alexander founded, during the time of the late Dr. Badham, the first bursary in connection with the Sydney University, a sum of £1000; she also gave a sum of £1000 towards the [illegible] ship to afford facilities for Jewish boys and girls obtaining education at the Sydney Grammar School. A third sum of £1000 was given by her to the University to aid scholars who had obtained their B.A. degree to further prosecute their studies with the object of entering upon a profession. Mrs. Alexander was suddenly attacked on Friday last by bronchitis. She was attended to by Drs. Mackay and MacLaurin, but they were unable to save her life, and she died yesterday morning at 8.15 o'clock. The funeral takes place from her late residence, No. 18, Margaret-street, on Thursday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the place of interment being the old cemetery in Devonshire-street. Mrs. Alexander has left one adopted daughter, who is the wife of Mr. Yates, D.S.M. At the hour appointed for the opening of the Summons Division of the Water Police Court yesterday, Mr. Addison, S.M., said he was requested to state that Mr. Yates, D.S.M., had just sustained a heavy bereavement in his family, which would prevent him being present to dispose of the business set down for hearing this forenoon. Mr. Addison then adjourned the Court till 2 p.m., when he disposed of the business.

MR. WILLIAM NEILL, J.P., manager of the City Bank, who has recently been sojourning in the district of Kiama for the purpose of relaxation, was a day or two ago attacked by serious illness. It is hoped, however, that with perfect quiet and careful attention he will soon be restored to health, but for the present his medical advisers have strictly prohibited visits from his friends.

A MEETING of the Australian Benevolent Society of Blues, Christ's Hospital, London, New South Wales Branch, was held at the Oxford Hotel, King-street, on Saturday evening last (being the anniversary of the birthday of King Edward VI., the founder of the school in 1552, and the 30th anniversary of the formation of the Society in Sydney) for the purpose of re-organising the society. There was a good representative meeting, and Mr. W. T. Pinney, J.P., was voted to the chair. The meeting having resolved itself into committee, the following gentlemen were unanimously elected officers:—President, Mr. W. T. Pinney, J.P.; trustees, his Honor Judge Wilkinson and Dr. Sedgwick; treasurer, Mr. W. H. Rowsell; hon. secretary, Mr. A. C. Barff; committee, Professor Scott, M.A., and Messrs. P. R. Pelley, H. A. Podmore, H. S. Gibson, W. Harris, and H. Simcoe. The primary object of the meeting having been gained, a social conversation took place as to the present position of the society there being a considerable sum to its credit. It was decided to call a meeting of subscribers and old Blues generally for the purpose of putting the society on a new and permanent basis, due notice of which will be given.

THE Sydney Amateur Sailing Club held its usual monthly meeting at Aaron's Exchange Hotel, last evening, Mr. Dietrich, the commodore, presided. A fair number of members were present. Messrs. L. Leplastrier, W. Rooks, W. Uhr, M'Dermott, J. C. Hunter, J. A. Steele, H. D. Allen, G. H. Clarke, M. M'Kinlay, A. W. Toogood, and C. P. M'Conville were elected members of the club, and several gentlemen were proposed for election at the next meeting. Mr. Harrison's motion for the alteration of certain rules upon which the annual and monthly meetings were held will be slightly changed. The programme for the ensuing season was read, and will be published very shortly. The business being over the meeting terminated.

THE members of the Glebe Presbyterian Church celebrated the eleventh anniversary of the church by a tea meeting, at which a large number were present. This was followed by a public meeting, held in the church, at which addresses were delivered and sacred songs were sung. The Rev. Andrew Gardiner, M.A., pastor of the church, acted as chairman, and, in opening the proceedings, congratulated the members of the church on the success which had attended their labours during the past year. From the report for the year 1884 it appeared that the membership of the congregation had considerably increased, and now stood at 372. As many as 79 had been admitted during the year, of whom 16 had joined for the first time, the net increase being 41. The attendance at the Sabbath services had been well maintained, so also had been that at the Bible class, the number on the roll amounting to 100. The Sabbath school, under the superintendentship of Mr. W. M'Kenzie, had been efficiently carried on during the year—the number of children on the roll being 293, and the average attendance 213, while the number of teachers enrolled was 33, of whom 21 were ladies. Addresses were delivered during the course of the evening by the Revs. J. M. Ross, Henry M'Credie, J. S. Laing, Robert Collie, Andrew Wilson, John Gardiner, H. Hutchinson, — Fullerton, and — Scott; the two last named being new arrivals from Scotland, come out to work in the field here. They received a very hearty welcome at the hands of the chairman, and in fact at the hands of all present. Mr. Bowmaker, superintendent of the City Mission, also addressed the meeting. A number of ladies, including Mrs. C. B. Foster, sang sacred songs during the evening, the meeting being brought to a conclusion by votes of thanks to all who had assisted.

At a meeting of the Prospect and Sherwood Municipal Council, held on Monday evening, Mr. Daniel Watson was appointed council clerk, in succession to Mr. J. J. Drew, resigned. There were twenty-seven applications for the position.

The City Coroner was engaged all day yesterday holding an inquest at Martin's Enmore Hotel, Enmore, concerning a fire which occurred on the 16th instant, on the premises of the Sydney Packing Company, Camden-street, Newtown. Mr. William Albany Foulerton was stated to be the sole proprietor of the business in question; the owner of the premises being Mr. John Donahue, of Newtown. Sub-inspector Larkins was present on behalf of the police authorities, and Mr. Pigott watched the case in the interests of the Fire Brigades Board. Evidence was given by Mr. Wyam Roberts, of the Australian Mutual Provident Society, with regard to a policy of insurance; and Mr. Herbert Barker, an insurance clerk, deposed to the fact of Foulerton having recently applied for the enlargement of his policy from £200 to £500; an application which was not granted, on account of the manager having been in Melbourne. A large amount of additional evidence was taken, and the inquest was finally adjourned until to-day.

Yesterday morning a labourer named Charles Holmes was admitted into the Prince Alfred Hospital, suffering from the fracture of the femur. Whilst he was working at Harbor's brick factory, at St. Peters, a chain, which weighed about a ton, slipped and struck him with terrific force, causing the injury referred to.

Charles Labbes, aged 32, a native of France, and a miner, residing at Peat's Ferry, was admitted into the Sydney Hospital yesterday, suffering from a compound fracture of some of the bones of the left foot, caused by a heavy stone falling upon it whilst working on the Northern railway, for Messrs. Amos Brothers, at Peat's Ferry. The patient was at once attended to by Dr. Westrum.

A branch lodge of the United Ancient Order of Druids, Grand Lodge of New South Wales, was opened on Saturday at Penrith. The grand lodge officers and a large number of visitors from Sydney were present. Previous to the opening a torchlight procession was held through the town, headed by the Penrith brass band, and there must have been over 1500 persons along the line of march who witnessed the procession. On returning to the lodge room (Caddy's building) business was commenced, and 31 candidates were initiated. In consequence of the grand officers and visitors having to return to Sydney the same evening the meeting was adjourned till November 11, on which date there are about 40 more candidates to be initiated. The lodge was named the Pride of the Forest, No. 204.

A very neat little manual has been published by Professor Clampett for the use of the pupils attending the gymnasium at the Y. M. C. A., of which the professor is superintendent. Within the limits of less than a score of neatly-printed pages the professor has managed to convey a good deal of interesting information on the subject of physical training. He points out that a sound body lies at the foundation of all that goes to make life a success, and that this can only be maintained by regular exercise. In his "vital thoughts" he observes that fat measures the disproportion between our diet and exercise, a fact of which business men and others who are much inclined to be over stout should take due note, and act accordingly. Another "vital thought" which is worthy of being carefully noted is that "he who has good health is young, whatever his age may be." The gymnasium appears to be very popular, as a large number of pupils have joined during the short time it has been in existence, and afternoon classes are about to be instituted. Not content with turning out good gymnasts, the professor also aims at turning out good students of anatomy. At any rate, he gives his pupils the benefit of his medical experience gained in the American hospitals, and shows them by diagrams and in other ways how the muscles are developed and what action a particular course of training must have on the physical structure of the pupil.

Sir Charles Gavan Duffy (remarks the London correspondent of the Argus) is continuing his examination of the constitutions conceded to colonies enjoying responsible government, in the hope of finding one that can be adapted to the requirements of Ireland when Mr. Parnell has succeeded in achieving the complete legislative independence of that island. He considers that Victoria enjoys one of the freest and most serviceable constitutions in the world. He holds that, under the Australian constitution, if a Governor have prejudices or prepossessions in respect to any particular set of advisers, they would count for nothing, as his Excellency dare not acknowledge or act on them; but, a little later, he somewhat inconsistently asserts that some Governors have abused their prerogative of dissolving Parliament. One statement made by Sir Charles Duffy may occasion a little surprise. He says that though his seat—Dalhousie, it is presumed—was contested more than a dozen times by a wealthy political party, who spared no cost to inflict expenditure upon him, yet he rarely paid more than £100 for a contested election, or more than £5 or £10 for an uncontested one.

Of the Afghan boundary question, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times writes that, "after occupying the first place in the public attention for six months, it is now gradually slipping into the background, as one Ministerial statement after another makes it evident that there is no longer any immediate danger of war. He would, however, be sanguine who ventured to predict that the arrangement was other than temporary, or that Russia would not await the first favourable opportunity for renewing her policy of aggression. It is to be hoped that the Government will not relax the work of preparation, but will use the breathing-time now given to such good purpose that when the danger again becomes imminent it may find us ready, with railways and roads completed up to and along the frontier, and a powerful army available for the occupation of Candahar at a few days' notice."

Waiting on the Adopting Bill and the question of Federation, the South Australian Register says:—"So far as federal legislation is of only local application, there would be no need for the colonies not affected by it to be excepted from it. So far as it is of general application, on such subjects, for instance, as the law of divorce, surely it cannot be meant that the colonies objecting can be exempted. If this is the meaning, federal legislation would be reduced to a ridiculous farce; in fact, the very idea of federation would be annihilated. Federation is a subject which if trifled with is fraught with great danger. Under the proposed scheme complete union is impossible, but for that very reason we should seek to go as far as we can towards securing it. In plain English, most of the arguments used by the supporters of the measure mean that federation is a doubtful blessing, and therefore the attempt to secure it must be bound hand and foot lest it should lead to mischief. The subject will have to be approached in quite another spirit if anything practical is to be accomplished."

In connection with a telegram from Adelaide, which appeared in the Herald of yesterday, the following extract from the South Australian Register of October 23 will further explain the matter referred to:—"For some days past there have been rumours that Mr. Godfrey Egremont, secretary of the Adelaide, Kensington, and Norwood Building and Investment Society, was missing. The directors of the society instituted inquiries with a view of ascertaining Mr. Egremont's whereabouts, but were unable to hear anything of his having been seen in the city during the past fortnight. As he had in no way intimated to them that he intended to leave Adelaide for a holiday, considerable anxiety was occasioned by his prolonged absence. While he had been away the business had been carried on for him by Mr. Archibald Waddell, clerk in Mr. Schroeder's office, which adjoins Mr. Egremont's, but this was done merely by way of friendship. On Wednesday, October 21, the landlord put in a distraint for rent, and seized all the books and papers. The directors then consulted Mr. Moulden, their solicitor, and the result has been that all the society's property has been returned by the landlord, as Mr. Egremont alone is liable for the rent. On Thursday morning the directors visited the office, and engaged a locksmith to open the safe. This he succeeded in doing after about two hours' hard work, and found the books of the society and cashboxes without money. For several years the society has been protected by a guarantee policy of £500, and the directors have assured themselves that this is still in force. Since Mr. Egremont left Adelaide two letters have been received from him by friends, in which he speaks of his return being delayed. The first letter is dated 'Melbourne, October 13,' and the second 'Melbourne, October 20,' but the directors have no knowledge of his being in Melbourne. On Thursday afternoon the society's books were handed over to Mr. W. L. Ware for examination."—[Our telegram states that defalcations to the amount of between £1000 and £2000 have been discovered.]

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

In the Legislative Assembly to-night the Federal Council Bill was passed through committee. The only important amendment was on clause 3, which provides for the representation of the colony on the Council. The Government proposal was that the representative need not of necessity be a member of the Government to the day.

Mr. Patterson proposed an amendment making it compulsory to be members of the Government, and after a long discussion Mr. Kerferd agreed to a modification requiring that, wherever practicable, Ministers must be appointed, and that all should be members of the Legislature, and should retire when the Government went out. The Government accepted Mr. Wrixon's new clause to have matters referred to the Federal Council by Act instead of address. Colonel Smith proposed that no question be remitted to the Council until approved of by the people at an ordinary general election. Mr. Gillies said it was impossible to bind any future Parliament. At any time when the Legislature wanted to remit a question, it would simply repeal the clause. The proposal was negatived. Colonel Smith announced that, as he had been informed that the Imperial Act could not be amended as he desired, he would not stonewall, as threatened. The Factories Bill made progress in committee.

The Council passed the Consolidated Revenue Bill through all its stages, and made good progress with the Licensing Bill. The paragraph defining the word "lodger" was omitted from the interpretation clause, several members contending that it would encourage Sunday traffic. A long discussion ensued concerning the hour of closing, several members advocating 11 o'clock. The clause was postponed. On clause 25, Mr. Cuthbert carried an amendment to the effect that no person should be deprived of his license under local option until he received compensation. An amendment was moved by Dr. Hearn on clause 26, to the effect that no reduction of the number of public-houses should be made unless one-third of the total number of electors on the roll voted for it. Colonel Sargood warmly opposed the amendment, and progress was reported.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

In the Legislative Council to-day, the Undue Subdivision of Land Prevention Bill was read a third time and passed. The Pacific Island Labourers Bill was read a second time, and after some debate, in which several members expressed their intention of moving amendments in committee which would considerably modify the bill, the House went into committee. The Licensing Bill was passed up to the 18th clause, with various amendments.

In the Legislative Assembly, the plans were approved for the proposed extension of the South Coast railway from Beenleigh to Southport and Nerang, 28 miles in length. The House went into Committee of Supply on the Railway Department. The Minister of Works stated, in reply to a question, that the Government intend carrying out the culverts and other work to duplicate the line from Brisbane to Ipswich by Government day work, instead of by the contract system. Sir Thomas M'Ilwraith, in a long speech, contended that the colony should fight New South Wales on equal terms, namely, by adopting the broad-gauge system. He said that the border line should be built on the broad gauge. The Premier said that the colony would be unable to bear the cost of the broad system for many years. He also said that the estimate of the Chief Engineer of Railways for the broad-gauge line from Brisbane to the border was over £1,500,000, exclusive of the rolling-stock. A long and acrimonious discussion took place on the item for the Southern and Western Railway of £254,000, and the debate is still proceeding.

INTERCOLONIAL NEWS.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own correspondents.)

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

Public attention here has, within the past few days, been directed to the strike among the wharf-labourers and coal-trimmers at Newcastle. The employers are viewing with very grave apprehension the power of federated trade-unions, and it has been boldly suggested that the Shipping Association should unite to resist what are regarded as the undue demands of labour, even to the extent of laying up the whole line of vessels engaged in business running along the Australian coast, so as to show that cohesion exists among shipowners and the importers interested. This proposal is now being considered. In some of the contracts in force in Melbourne a clause providing for the suspension of the delivery of coal from a certain day after a strike has begun till a certain number of days after the men return to work is inserted. This provision in these contracts is to be availed of, and, consequently, considerable inconvenience will be suffered. Fortunately, however, owing to the approach of the summer months, the domestic consumers will not be greatly affected. The Government, too, owing to their having obtained a reserve of 10,000 tons from Messrs. Jas. Paterson and Sons, the contractors during the recent war preparations, are in a secure position for some time to come; and the gas companies have such a supply on hand that they will not suffer to any extent. The South Australian Association had expressed their willingness to co-operate, and it was decided to wire to the New South Wales Association for their decision.

It has been decided that a review of the military forces shall be held on the Flemington racecourse on November 9.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, Tuesday.

A writ was issued to-day for the election of a member of the Legislative Assembly for the Barcoo, under the Additional Members Act recently passed. The nomination has been fixed for the 10th November, and the polling for the 24th.

Sir John Coode has written to the Government, promising to reach Queensland about the 6th November; but he can only remain for three weeks. This is to be regretted, because it is feared that his brief stay will prevent him from visiting Normanton.

Supplementary estimates to the amount of £168,831 were presented to the Legislative Assembly to-day.

The latest Charters Towers crushings are as follows:—Washington P. Company have crushed 50 tons of stone for 100 oz. of gold; Union Company, No. 1, 88 tons for 172oz.; Day Dawn Company, No. 7, 86 tons for 79oz.; Dan O'Connell Company, 400 tons for 666oz.; Day Dawn Block and Wyndham Company, 492 tons for 776oz., and a dividend of 2s. per share has been declared. The local banks have purchased during the week 3067oz. of gold.

A telegram from Normanton states that considerable excitement prevails there over the Croydon rush, which is 130 miles from Normanton, in the direction of the Etheridge goldfield, and 25 miles from Green Creek telegraph station. A great number of miners are on the ground, and they are increasing daily. Several good reef shows have been opened, but no alluvial finds have yet been reported. There is no water on the ground for crushing; 12 tons of stone are being carted to the Etheridge, 120 miles distant, for crushing.

The steamer Herbert, which arrived at Cooktown yesterday afternoon from Port Moresby, reported that H.M. ships Undine, Diamond, Swinger, Raven, and Harrier, and the Governor Blackall, are all at Moresby Island. At Kalli, which is a small village on the coast, about 20 miles east of Port Moresby, the bushmen came down and slaughtered 30 of the inhabitants.

ALBURY, Tuesday.

A public meeting was held this evening at the local Council-chambers, to consider the proposal recently brought forward in favour of subdividing the temporary common for sale. Mr. G. Billson, mayor, occupied the chair. Alderman Gulson referred to the fact of a petition having been sent to the Minister for Lands, praying for a subdivision of the common, and strongly condemned the action taken, as if the land were sold the town would not receive the proceeds; and, instead of the lots going to small settlers, they would probably all be bought up by speculators. The speaker moved a resolution protesting against the sale of the common, and the motion was carried unanimously, as also one for the appointment of a committee to draw up a counter petition, and take any other steps deemed necessary.

BATHURST, Tuesday.

The Forbes murder case, which commenced yesterday morning at the Circuit Court, is still unfinished. Mr. Butterworth, counsel for the prisoners, Thomas and Helen King, addressed the Court, the female prisoner having previously made a statement in which she asserted the innocence of herself and her husband. The Crown Prosecutor replies to-morrow morning, and the Judge will sum up. The jury, who were locked up last night, are under lock and key to-night.

BALRANALD, Tuesday.

The river is falling fast. The weather is warm, and grass is getting dried up.

HAY, Tuesday.

The river is 3 feet 8 inches above summer level, and falling fast.

GRAFTON, Tuesday.

At the sale of Mr. Amos' property, held at Ulmarra on Saturday, the Exchange Hotel fetched £2200; Retallick's store, £650; Cramp's shop, £360; another shop and house, £400; and a house and blacksmith's shop, £400. The total amount of the sale was £4720. The farm known as M'Mahon's, at the South Arm, was sold privately for £3200.

Splendid rain has been falling over the district to-day, and the weather still retains the appearance of being showery.

GUNDAGAI, Tuesday.

The weather during the past two weeks has been very warm, and the country is drying up fast. Rain is badly wanted.

MURRUMBURRAH, Tuesday.

The steamer Bega, with the members of the Marine Board, anchored outside the Heads, but Sir John Coode remained at Ballina. The pilot tug put out to the Bega, but none of the Board landed. Great dissatisfaction has been expressed everywhere on the Tweed at Sir John Coode not coming to the Heads, and at the Board not landing.

NEWCASTLE, Tuesday.

An accident happened to-day to Mr. John Garratty, blacksmith, at Platisburg. While changing the belt that drives a circular saw, the shaft caught his clothes, and took him round several times, tearing his right arm, between the belt and the shaft. The injured man then walked to Dr. Nash, who, with Dr. J. B. Nash, performed the necessary operation of amputation. The patient is doing as well as can be expected.

HAY, Tuesday.

The weather is very hot and dry, and the grass is burning off rapidly. The stock, however, are in good condition.

The local stock movements are as under:—4000 store sheep, from Murga station for Pulhall station; 105 rams, for the same destination; 8200 fat sheep, from Pulhall Park for Melbourne market; 2300 fat sheep, from Mulbong station to Melbourne market.

THE WELSH TEAM, 1885.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Your report in this morning's paper of the proceedings at the Rifle Association meeting on Saturday is hardly fair or generous to us; therefore I feel sure you will kindly allow me this short explanation.

Your report hints that a gentleman of decidedly cosmopolitan characteristics formed one of the Welsh team. I am at a loss to whom it could allude, as six of the present team shot last year, the other two, Sergeant Seccombe and A. B. Goulding, being unable to 'shoot this time—the former because he did not attend the meeting, and the latter because he had to shoot in the "Last Try," and therefore asked me to release him.

Cadets Thomas and Rennie had very kindly volunteered to shoot for the Welsh team as far back as Thursday last, but on my return to the range at 1 o'clock on Saturday, after a temporary absence in town, I found that Thomas had been chosen to shoot for Australia. This left me one short; and, at the last moment, Mr. Armstrong (who satisfied me as to his national claim) very pluckily came forward.

I certainly had been solicited to give a place in the Welch team to one or two gentlemen who certainly had every claim, and were far better shots than myself and one or two others, but I did not think it right to put out men who shot last year in the face of a certain amount of good-natured chaff, &c., such as we enjoyed then.

I much regret we did not shoot better, but we did our best, and it should be remembered that my field for selection is very limited; that all the first-class shots were long ago claimed by the earlier constituted teams, now of many years' standing; that the fact of once shooting in a team determines a man's future nationality in forthcoming matches (which, of course, was a powerful inducement for a rising young shot like Cadet Thomas to shoot for the land of his own birth, and for which I certainly do not blame him), and the undoubted fact that many men do not care, from various reasons, to shoot in any team which has little or no chance of winning. In conclusion, I can only say that my best efforts will be to the fore to keep up the Welsh team; and if any little showers of cold water fall on us, we will remember that in sunny New South Wales such showers are a positive necessity for well-being, and that they will only ensure a hardier growth to the little Welsh leek, and add fresh lustre to the glorious memory of old Wales by the prosperity of its sons in New South Wales. I am, &c.,

J. STUART MASON, Captain Welsh Team.

FLEMINGTON TRAINING NOTES.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

Tuesday being so near the Derby, it was only natural that the attendance at Flemington should be above the ordinary dimensions. Not to miss any of the expected good things that were likely to come off, a fair sprinkling of the regular habitués were at their posts before daybreak. Very soon the hall was set rolling merrily, and for an hour or more gallop upon gallop succeeded sharply on each other. Kit Nubbles commenced, with Off Colour for a companion. The Cup distance was the task of the game and fast hurdle-racer, and the first 5 furlongs were covered in 1 minute 8¾ seconds. The round was done in 2 minutes 34¾ seconds, and the entire journey in 3 minutes 44¾ seconds. To all appearances Kit Nubbles had the weight up. Kingmaster and Alphabet were next observed going a round on the sand, but they were not fully extended, the circle taking 2 minutes 41 seconds. First Prince and Waiting Maid went at three-quarter pace and brushed home fast. Remus went a strong round; Anglesey and Cyclops doing about the same; while Royal Maid recorded 1 minute 22¾ seconds for the last six furlongs of the round. Chuckster and Denmark (Robertson on the former) started off for a mile and half. At the latter end the steeplechaser had tailed off, the time of the winner being 2 minutes 50¾ seconds. Thunderbolt (with Power up) and Winchester galloped two miles, but the pace was very mixed, and was no criterion whatever, but rather somewhat of a poser for the tons. Perhaps the best five furlongs' spin of the morning was done by Blairgowrie and Fernandez, the former of whom marked 1 minute 4 seconds for the distance. Signor and Israelite were next round on the sand track in 2 minutes 37 seconds; and Middlemarch bowled along on the same track. Uralla went by herself, doing the round in 2 minutes 34 seconds; Dunlop covering the same journey in half a second more. Brown and Rose and Warwick negotiated a couple of fast miles. Liverpool was similarly employed, Vanguard winding up with him, though the time for over half the distance was anything but brilliant. Cerise and Blue and Wing also galloped two miles, at the end of which the horse had been beaten off. Phaon and Chesham did medium work. Philip Augustus and Tamarisk went for a fast five furlongs. Acolyte was accompanied by Rebus at the commencement of his gallop, Fernlea joining in at the tail end, and the round was done in 2 minutes 35 seconds. Prince Imperial galloped round the sand track in 2 minutes 36¾ seconds, moving with all his old smoothness, but he pulled up a bit lame. Acme and Brigantine were slipped over five furlongs, which they made in 1 minute 7 seconds. Bon Bon and Allander strode round the tan track, and Tom Brown on the outer track went at three-quarter pace, winding up a fast spin for six furlongs. In the interval Stornaway was observed on the inside course, where he worked strongly with Medea and Agatha. First Chester, Isonomy (in his hood), and another covered a mile and a half round sand in 2 minutes 52 seconds and Belmont and Fusee had a strong gallop. All eyes were next directed to Nordenfeldt (Ellis up), Tempe, and Percussion, as they came up at the lower sheds. The appointed journey was the Derby distance, and the trio struck off together. Six furlongs were accomplished in 1 minute 23 seconds; soon after which Percussion retired. The Derby favourite then kept pounding along with the mare sticking to him, and the round was recorded in 2 minutes 34½ seconds, the mile and a-half being made in 2 minutes 49 seconds. For the latter part of the gallop Ellis appeared to be doing hard driving work on the colt. This flutter over, Crossfire and Yellow Jacket went for five furlongs in 1 minute 6 seconds, or the half mile in 52 seconds. The Agent strode twice round the tan track, and Plausible had a couple of good useful miles on the sand track. Despot did a rattling mile and a half in 2 minutes 46 seconds, and the round in 2 minutes 51½ seconds, without doubt the most genuine gallop of the morning. Lord Exeter was on the sand for a two miles gallop, of which the last round took 2 minutes 38 seconds. St. Lawrence did moderate work. Lantern and Lavington went a fast mile, before the finish of which the last-named cut it. Lord Wilton moved slowly round the tan, and Honeydew was employed the same way inside the course. Arsenal and Gasburner started off for a mile and a half, recording the following times:—Six furlongs, 1 minute 24½ seconds; mile and a quarter, 2 minutes 22½ seconds; the round, 2 minutes 35½ seconds; the last half-mile, 56½ seconds; and the whole journey, 2 minutes 49½ seconds. St. John and Aristation next claimed attention, two miles being their mission. The early part was anything but fast; but the pace improved as they went on, and when Agitation beat a retreat Jocular took her place, and wound up with the Cup horse. The first round was done in 2 minutes 37 seconds, and the last in 2 minutes 32½ seconds, the total two miles being done in 3 minutes 48¼ seconds, with 2 minutes 51 seconds for the last mile. Kenneth, St. Paul, and Dividend brushed home fast. Some disappointment was occasioned through Trenton not peeling off. The New Zealander was on the ground as early as 6 o'clock; but up to breakfast time had not taken the track. Damocles and First Consul galloped a fast five furlongs in 1 minute 0 seconds, the half mile being done in 54½ seconds.

Subsequently the straight five furlongs on the course was opened for the accommodation of the Maribyrnong Plate candidates. First Consul, Damocles, Upopa, and Anita had a preliminary; while Trojan ran clean away from Maddelina, Al

TENDERS (endorsed "Tender for Steam Launch for the Port of Fremantle") will be received at this office until noon of FRIDAY, October 30, from persons willing to supply a Steam Launch for the Port of Fremantle.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION.

The launch is to be built of timber, coppered to six inches above the water line; to be sixty feet long on keel, twelve feet beam, and six feet 6 inches deep; to be fitted with compound engines to ensure a mean speed in seagoing trim of twelve knots an hour, and with sufficient power to enable her to tow vessels into and out of harbour; to have cabins forward and aft, properly finished and fitted with all conveniences; to be schooner-rigged, and supplied with all masts, spars, and sails, lights, anchors and chain, buoys, &c., complete.

The Government do not bind themselves to accept the lowest or any tender, and will require the guarantee of two responsible persons for the due performance of the contract.

Forms of Tender may be had on application to the various Resident Magistrates, and at the Public Offices, Perth; and no tender will be entertained unless received in the prescribed form.

Tenders, with price, specification, and complete drawings of launch and engines, together with date of delivery, and including all charges for delivery in Fremantle, Western Australia, will be received at the Public Works Department, Perth.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—Times, July 13, 1864.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was chlorodyne.—See Lancet, December 31, 1864.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne "is prescribed by scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course it would not be thus singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."—Medical Times, January 16, 1864.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is the best and most certain remedy in cough, colds, asthma, consumption, neuralgia, rheumatism, &c.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is a certain cure for cholera, dysentery, diarrhœa, colic, &c.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—Caution: None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle. Sole manufacturer, J. T. Davenport, 33, Great Russell-street, London. Sold in bottles at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d, and 11s. Agents, Sydney, ELLIOTT BROTHERS.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

The English mail per P. and O. steamer Ballaarat was delivered in Sydney yesterday morning. Our London letter and papers are to the 18th September; but most of the political and foreign news has been anticipated by the copious telegrams from Europe contained in the San Francisco papers received on Friday by the City of Sydney.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 18.

According to the intelligence of the present week the Carolines question would seem to have safely entered into the labyrinths of diplomacy, in the toils and entanglements of which it will no doubt remain until, humanly speaking, the risk of the European peace being broken by a Hispano-German conflict has passed away. Both Germany and Spain are ostensibly preparing for the worst. The former has ordered a steamer, the Nachtigall, which was bound for the Cameroons, to remain at Falmouth until further orders, and has directed German vessels in other quarters to hold themselves in readiness for contingencies, while Spain has been pushing forward her naval defences, laying submarine mines, purchasing fast cruisers and torpedoes, and otherwise strengthening her fleet. But the impression prevails that these warlike preparations are intended more to dazzle the public eye than to indicate that there is any likelihood of the Caroline question being settled by recourse to arms. The state of Spain, as a whole, is much more tranquil than was the case last week. Little doubt is entertained as to the loyalty of the Army—hitherto the most uncertain factor in Spanish politics. King Alfonso's wisdom in quietly checking promotions from the ranks, and endeavouring to introduce a class of officers of higher social grade and purely professional leanings, bids fair to result in depriving the Army of its political character, and to make it more reliable as a means of repressing popular tumults. The feeling against the king has very materially diminished, and monarchists are now beginning to hold up their heads a little more. The reply of the Spanish Government to the German Note does not hold out any hope that the Court of Madrid will consent to arbitration; but since the Spanish people have been made aware of the fact that the voice of Europe is unanimous in support of Germany's demand that the question shall be so decided there has been a visible abatement in their opposition to that idea. At the same time it is not at all improbable that the way out of the difficulty to which I alluded last week—namely, the conclusion of a treaty by which Germany shall enjoy all the rights of possession in the Carolines, while Spain retains the nominal sovereignty—will be adopted. According to the latest intelligence, it is believed that Prince Bismarck, though at present he adheres firmly to his arbitration proposals, would not be unwilling to fall in with a solution of this character.

Bismarck looks forward to the time when Holland, with her extensive colonial possessions in the Pacific, will become incorporated into the German Empire, and the Carolines will just nicely round off the German colonies in the North Pacific. When this result has been brought about, as in the course of no great distance of time seems almost inevitable, the preponderance of Germany in the north Pacific will be fully as great as is that of Australasia in the south. This surmise is believed to explain, not only the German Chancellor's anxiety to get hold of the Carolines, but also the great interest which he has taken on behalf of Australasia in the recent Telegraph Conference at Berlin.

A very animated political week, in which Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Morley, Mr. Plunket, Sir William Harcourt, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, and Lord Ripon have been holding forth at greater or less length, has been brought to an appropriate close by the publication of Mr. Gladstone's Midlothian manifesto. This document, which is of great length, has appeared this afternoon—too recently to allow time for full public criticism thereon. It is not, however, calculated to produce any striking effect on the country; and, although it appeals to all sections of the Liberal party to work harmoniously together, its moderation will prevent its satisfying the growing demands of the Radicals. In some points, as, for instance, land reform, Mr. Gladstone is far behind the Chamberlain school; and his language, which is almost apologetic for the Established Church, and exceedingly temperate in regard to the House of Lords—insisting on the necessity of recognising the influence of birth and wealth—will certainly not meet with the approval of the extreme wing of his supporters. To the demands for Irish independence Mr. Gladstone has only a flat refusal.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach has, on behalf of the Government, replied to Mr. Parnell's Irish National Independence ultimatum. His answer was, as everyone expected it would be, a direct negative, as unmistakable as that of Mr. Chamberlain a fortnight ago. Mr. Parnell has now been placed in possession of the official answer of both Liberals and Conservatives to his ultimatum, and we are awaiting some fresh disclosure of his intentions. Mr. Parnell, however, will probably not make any further utterance until Mr. Gladstone's manifesto has had time to be read all over the country, and possibly also not until Lord Salisbury has delivered himself upon the subject of Irish independence. We learn from the sister isle that, up to the time of Mr. Chamberlain's speech at Warrington, the Irish Nationalists were uncertain as to the side on which they would throw their weight. But the "never, never," of the ex-President of the Board of Trade appears to have exasperated them to such an extent that they have decided in all cases where a Conservative is opposing a Liberal, and they are not strong enough to carry a Nationalist candidate, that they will vote for the Conservative party.

The general feeling of dissatisfaction which prevails in England at the recall of Sir Charles Warren, and the meeting to protest against the same, held at the Cannon-street Hotel, has afforded the Times an opportunity of lecturing the Colonial Office upon its imperfections. Your readers will, no doubt, agree with the leading journal when it says that the root of the mischief of our South African policy "lies in the chaotic arrangements dear to the Colonial Office, which often seem expressly designed to use up energy in friction instead of work." The only creditable feature in the South African policy of the present Government—the members of which, while in opposition, made such ostentatious protestations of devotion to the colonial idea—is that they have converted Bechuanaland into a Crown colony. But there still remain Zululand and Basutoland to be dealt with, and, as the speakers at the Cannon-street Hotel meeting declared, there is no man so well fitted to grapple with South African affairs as the one whom the Government have now recalled in the very midst of his successes.

The sixpenny telegrams will come into force on the 1st of next month. The rate of tariff is to be ½d. a word, including both addresses, with a minimum of sixpence. Names of towns and villages, whether double or treble barrelled, will count as one word, and instead of each figure in a telegram counting as one word, the Continental plan of treating five figures as one word will be adopted.

According to advertisements which have been appearing in the newspapers, an enterprising firm of publishers are about to issue a series of standard works at the extraordinary price of threepence a volume. They could not expect to do this at a profit, however great the sale commanded by their books, and we must therefore conclude that, like the penny editions of Dickens' novels, which have for some time been on sale in the London streets, the venture is being made as an advertisement. The idea of advertising their wares, by publishing penny editions of standard novels, the covers of which trumpet forth the superior advantages of their goods, appears to have been so successful at the hands of the ingenious firm of tradesmen who first adopted it, that we must assume other workers are about to appear in the same field. Literary men, however, will not be pleased at the degradation of their calling to the purposes of mere trading puffs. Literary labour, at the present day, is not so over well-paid that pecuniary remuneration can be urged as a solatium for an attack upon the dignity of the craft. As in nearly all other professions—save that of the professor at a Scotch University, who makes from £600 to £4000 a year by working six months in the year, five days in the week, and two hours a day—the competition in literature tends to keep down the profits. Those who happen to strike a good vein, like the authors of "Vice Versa," "Called Back," &c., reap a rich reward for their labours, but the majority of literary workers have to be content with much more modest remuneration. The public taste just now is very peculiar, especially in works of fiction. The "general reader" wants something hot, strong, spicy, and short, and if he can have this, compressed within the limits of a shilling volume, he is willing to purchase to such an extent as will handsomely recoup the author and his publisher. Those who can hit the public taste, however, are the exception. The rank and file of literary workers are much more moderately paid, while, as a leading journal remarked the other day, there exists a residuum which in point of destitution will compare with Grub-street in the days of Savage, Johnson, and Boyse. The £200,000 which Victor Hugo died worth is more than an English writer could hope to realise. Dickens only left £80,000 behind him. Charles Reade and Anthony Trollope—both of whom, however, lost large sums in speculation—died worth £20,000 and £40,000 respectively, though the latter is said to have earned something like £70,000 during his long, laborious, literary life. For the poet and novelist, indeed, the present times are not much better than were those eighty or a hundred years ago. George Crabbe—Pope in worsted stockings—made £3000 by his "Tales of the Hall;" Byron was paid £4000 for "Childe Harold;" Moore received £15,000 for his Irish melodies; Young was paid £3000 for his "Universal Passion;" Hume received £700 a volume for his "History of England;" Smollett made £2000 by his continuation of the same; Henry received £8300 for his "Great Britain;" Robertson sold the copyright of "Charles V." for £4500; Hawkesworth got £6000 for his account of the South Sea expedition; Horne Tooke earned £5000 by his "Diversions of Purley;" and Hayley received £11,000 for a "Life of Cowper." The majority of the above names are those of quite average literary workers, but their earnings were far in excess of those of the run of bookmen of the present day.

The play of "Human Nature," produced at Drury Lane Theatre last Saturday, was another triumph for Mr. Augustus Harris. As a piece there was nothing of special interest about it, except that it is the first play, as far as we know, in which a husband's suspicion of his wife's unfaithfulness has gone to the extent of leading him to get a divorce from her. The plot, as a whole, is simply the old story of vice temporarily triumphant and virtue ultimately rewarded. But, as a spectacular drama, "Human Nature" is one of Gus. Harris's brightest achievements. Several scenes from the late war in the Soudan are reproduced with great fidelity while the triumphal procession of soldiers on their return to London from the Soudan is put upon the stage in a magnificent fashion.

On the whole, the British Association seems to have had a very good time of it at Aberdeen. There have been two excursions to Balmoral, and, on Tuesday night, Sir Lyon Playfair and the ex-president, Lord Rayliegh, were entertained at the Castle by her Majesty. Perhaps the fact of Sir Lyon Playfair having formerly been a member of the Royal household had a good deal to do with this act of condescension. The most popular savant of the Aberdeen meeting has, of course, been Sir John Lubbock. On Tuesday Sir John read a very interesting paper on "The intelligence of the dog," in which he said that he had taught a black poodle to pick out cards, upon which were printed such words as "food," "water," "out," "tea," &c., and to bring them to him, the dog clearly understanding that the bringing of the card was a request for the article named thereon. In the course of the discussion a number of instances of canine teachability were adduced. One gentleman knew of a dog that would never accompany its master out on Sunday, though it eagerly followed him on other days of the week; a lady said that in three weeks she had, by means of a bone attached to the door bell, taught the dog to ring the bell; while a third person knew a family which had taught their dog to bark at the mention of the late Opposition, and to show interest and pleasure at the mention of the late Government.

The second of the three matches between George and Cummings—the four mile race—came off on Saturday at Edinburgh in the presence of about 7000 spectators. It resulted in a very easy victory for the professional. George went to the front at starting, and kept ahead for the first three miles. Cummings then passed him, and George, apparently finding it hopeless to regain his lost position, gave up the race at three miles and a-quarter. Cummings ran on for another half-mile, when the judges told him he might stop. So far, both George and Cummings have got a race to their credit. The final match of 10 miles is to come off at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, on the 28th instant, and is looked forward to with the keenest interest.

A report is current in civic circles that Australian toads are being used in the manufacture of aldermanic turtle soup. The news is too horrible to be true. Better even the foul fiend conger, than the antipodean toad.

Under the heading of "Greater Britons in the Old Country," the Pall Mall Gazette mentions the fact that at the present time there are 351 students from India and the colonies at Edinburgh University alone. Of this number 104 are from India, and the remaining 247 from the colonies—Australia and South Africa being most fully represented.

There has just been announced an important contribution to dramatic literature. It is "Actors and Actresses of Great Britain and the United States from the days of David Garrick to the present time," and is to be the work of Mr. Brander Matthews and Mr. Lawrence Hutton.

OUR PARIS LETTER.

PARIS, SEPT. 18.

The past week has been uneventful. Nothing has occurred to make the situation between Germany and Spain either better or worse. The excitement caused by the highly critical state of affairs a fortnight since has disappeared, because the popular belief is growing daily that when nations fall out over conflicting interests in distant parts of the world if they will only give themselves the time to meditate upon the difficulties, dangers, and costliness of war they will discover a way of settling their differences without having recourse to violent measures. The days are gone when nations fought for the love of fighting. A war now between two European Powers cannot be otherwise than a great disaster to humanity. This truth is so clearly understood that wars which would have become inevitable less than a century ago are now avoided because the rival races primarily interested take time to reflect before they rush to arms, and because the feeling of the civilised world is strongly opposed to war. But although the chances of hostilities between Germany and Spain are sensibly lessened by every day that is spent in negotiating, because delay brings thoughtfulness and calm, the situation still remains exceedingly embroiled. The danger that now menaces Europe comes less from Germany than from Spain; at all events the most disturbing causes at the present moment are beyond the Pyrenees. There we perceive a race that for centuries exercised a mighty influence upon the destinies of the world, full of rebellion against the decree of fate that has so shrunken and curtailed its power in modern times, and ready to seize upon the most desperate means in order to obtain some salve for its wounded pride. It is this state of the public mind in Spain which is the chief element of uncertainty and perplexity in connection with the complications which have arisen between that country and Germany.

Certain rumours of fresh difficulties arising, or likely to arise, between France and China, have furnished a topic for the journalists here, which they might perhaps have allowed to pass were they not driven to clutch at straws by the absolute dearth of planks. It is said that China intends to enter a protest against the deposition of the King or Emperor of Annam, and the appointment of his successor by Admiral Courbet. Even if China had so protested, the incident would not have been very serious, but up to the present time the French government has received no official communication from the Celestial Government on the subject. Under the Treaty of Peace signed in June last China undertakes "to do nothing calculated to interfere with the work of pacification assumed by France, and to respect both now and in the future treaties, conventions, and arrangements directly made or to be made between France and Annam." It is obvious that this clause recognises in France the right of exercising the fullest discretion in dealing with the administration of the country, from the king downwards. Now, when it is borne in mind that the French garrison at Hué was treacherously attacked by the Annamite army, acting, without doubt, at the instigation of the King, it is in no way surprising that the French, being masters of the country, should have deposed a mock sovereign so little to be trusted. Whether China actively intervenes or not, it is clear that the troubles of France with regard to her "Indo-Chinese Empire" are by no means at an end. Since the death of Tu Duc, in July, 1883, Chanh-Monh, whom Admiral Courbet invested with the Royal dignity, is the sixth sovereign who has reigned over Annam with the protection of French bayonets. All except the fifth were poisoned or strangled, more or less mysteriously. The royal office in that fantastic country now offers so few advantages to compensate for the almost absolute certainty of being strangled or poisoned at an early date, that the French Government may shortly be driven to the desperate expedient of advertising in the London Daily Telegraph for a person sufficiently ambitious and hard-up to accept the post of Chanh-Monh when his turn comes to disappear. Any King of Annam will necessarily find himself between two extremely unpleasant fires. Speaking figuratively, he will only be permitted to select the sauce with which he would rather be eaten. If he attempts to keep faith with his French masters, the Mandarins, whose services he cannot dispense with, will soon find a means of prevailing upon him to die an unnatural death with the last horrible public scandal; and if, like the recently-deposed king, he lends them his ear and cultivates the virtues of a patriot, he will be certainly disgraced, and divested of his royal robes, if he is so fortunate as to escape being accidentally shot with a French bullet.

The venomous hatred which continues to animate a section of the French press with regard to England has received a fresh illustration in consequence of the reputed diplomatic action of the English Government at the Court of Madrid. The following extract from an article in the France will suffice to show with what intense distrust every act of England is weighed and examined by the Anglophobists here:—

"The English Government has just offered its mediation to Spain. Without openly making common cause with Germany, England upholds the note submitted by Mr. Layard in 1876. England knows how to cleverly insinuate herself into every question from which she hopes to derive some advantage. For this reason she always tried to place herself between China and ourselves. If she now tries to meddle with the affairs of the Peninsula it is not that she is particularly interested in the conflict that has arisen, or that she expects to see her advice accepted; but because she has eagerly seized this occasion of showing Germany that she can be of use to her, if, on the other hand, Germany would be so good as to back up the Wolff mission to Constantinople. The rapprochement of England and Germany has already resulted in adjourning the solution of the Afghan question, and keeping back the Muscovite from India. But England does not appear to have understood that the Russians have no object to gain by entering upon a war in Asia, where time is working for them, and that the movements of the Russian army were only intended to compel England to release Egypt. The renewal of the three Emperors' alliance ought to enlighten her as to the futility of her efforts at Constantinople. It was considered useless to encourage Russia to move further on the road to India, because it was thought that England since the return of the Conservatives to power had made her submission to the will of Europe. The rapprochement of England with France and Turkey is closer than it was in Mr. Gladstone's time; but England must know that an agreement is only possible on the condition of her evacuating Egypt. She cannot make up her mind to do this. She would have done so by the force of necessity to save India, but reassured on that head, she is becoming more enterprising in the Mediterranean." The article concludes as follows:—"British diplomacy mixes up all sorts of questions in a very clever fashion. It takes synthetic views of things, as did the Latins in former days; but we will not allow ourselves to be misled. The conflict between Spain and Germany will remain localised. Indeed, everything goes to show that it will become a question of interior policy to be settled between Alfonso XII. and his people. The principle of right will be easily established either by arbitration or by a conference. It is in vain for England to endeavour to make use of the situation in such a manner as to make her sojourn in Egypt perpetual."

Some hitherto unpublished letters by Balzac, written between the years 1828 and 1832, have just been printed, and they throw much light upon his early trials and struggles before literary success came to his rescue. It is generally supposed that "Les Chouans," Balzac's first work of note, was published in 1827. The letters now brought to light by M. de Haussey prove unmistakably that Balzac did not commence writing it until the close of the year 1828. About that time the commercial enterprise with which he was associated collapsed, and the man destined to influence so deeply the spirit of modern fiction was not only rendered penniless by the crash, but in order to save his honour (in those days it was considered in France highly dishonourable to become a bankrupt), he was obliged to draw upon the resources of his parents to such an extent that their ruin was almost as complete as his own. He resolved to make restitution to them to them with the earnings of his pen. He planned out "Les Chouans," but it would take him some months to write it, and he was so poor that he knew not how to live or where to lodge. While in this predicament he bethought him of an old friend of his father, General de Pommereul, whom the elder Balzac, a man of rough manners, but with a very generous heart, had once rendered a signal service. M. de Pommereul was one of the landed aristocracy whose property was confiscated by the revolutionary Government. After the revolution he returned to France quite penniless. The elder Balzac, having learnt the extent of his misfortune, called upon him one day, and having placed two heavy bags upon the table, retreated immediately, saying as he left, "These 10,000 crowns will be more useful to you than to me. In fact, I don't know what to do with them. You can give them back to me when those who have robbed you have restored your property." It is needless to say that this money was of enormous assistance to the De Pommereul family until the arrival of Bonaparte to the supreme power, when restitution was made. Honoré de Balzac wrote then in his distress to General de Pommereul, and asked him to give him a home while he was writing his book. He was told to come at once. When he arrived at the château he wore such a dreadfully shabby hat that his host drove him at once to the nearest hatter. Balzac passed several months very happily at this hospitable château, and it was here that he laid the foundation of his fame.

From the papers to hand to 18th September we select the following extracts:—

WORKING-MEN CANDIDATES AND THE GENERAL ELECTION.

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says:—"After making inquiry in several quarters of working-men candidates for Parliament, and of Conservatives as well as Liberals, I am forced to the conclusion that very few of these candidates are likely or confidently expect to be returned at the general election. In some cases the canvass on their behalf has been so disappointing in its results that the candidates have discreetly retired from the contest. Even when the Liberal and Radical associations have been in complete harmony and have agreed to give every facility for the election of a working man, the candidature seems in many instances, if not in most, to have practically failed. I am assured by experienced working men that the position of affairs is frankly recognised among them, though not openly confessed, and that perhaps not 50 will go to the poll throughout the country, while the return of a dozen would agreeably surprise them. The most intelligent leaders of the party do not fail to see the true cause of their weakness—it is a lack of organisation."

SUSPECTED GERMAN SPIES IN FRANCE.

A Belfort journal states that two elderly and two young gentlemen who were lately walking on the fortifications were challenged by a sentry and asked what they wanted. They asked the way to Saint Maurice, but the sentry observed that instead of going in that direction they closely inspected the fortifications; and he, who understood German, heard one of them say, "Here would be a good spot for an assault." He communicated with the commandant of the fort, who sent orders to arrest them. They turned out to be a Prussian general from Mulhouse, his aide-de-camp, and his two sons. They were searched, and maps were found upon them. In a short time a telegram from a superior authority came in these words—"Conduct the prisoners to the frontier."

BOYCOTTING ON A GRAND SCALE.

In an article headed "Can We Hurt England?" United Ireland, Mr. Parnell's paper, deals with Mr. Chamberlain's recent figures, and sets forth the injury the 4,000,000 of Irish people can do the other 34,000,000 of people in the United Kingdom. It mentions what it terms matter-of-fact eventualities that everybody who thinks that the Irish 4,000,000 can but grind their teeth, however the 34,000,000 may choose to hector them, would do well not to overlook. There is, it says, the possibility of a great national boycotting decree against English commercial travellers, the boycotting of every English official, soldier, and policeman in Ireland, the boycotting, if need be, of every steamship or cockboat carrying on intercourse between the two islands. For while all these things would involve a great deal of red ruin and the breaking up of laws, would anybody say they are beyond the power of a people ready to face any sea of weltering troubles, provided that Mr. Chamberlain shows them that English domination in Ireland cannot otherwise be overthrown? It exhorts Mr. Chamberlain to moderate the rancour of his tongue.

TERRIBLE SCENE AT A FIRE.

A fire broke out on September 13 at 4, Darwin-street, Old Kent-road, in a house occupied by three families. At half-past 2 o'clock a policeman saw flames issuing from the back room on the ground-floor, and he raised an alarm. In a minute or two several of the inmates were seen at the upper windows piteously appealing for help. It was evident that escape by the staircase was cut off, and great excitement prevailed. The flames seemed to enveloped the whole house, and although a man had been despatched to the fixed point at Star-corner for a fire-escape, no aid arrived for some little time. Suddenly one of the men at the windows on the first floor jumped out, and fell with a thud on the ground. Then a child was thrown out, and the crowd were horrified when it was seen that the little creature—a girl of a few years old—had fallen upon the railing surrounding the garden. The people in the street began to tear up the ironwork in front, but before they had finished two little boys had been thrown out, and one of these also fell upon the railings. By this time blankets and other things had been brought to the spot, and then a woman jumped out and was picked up shockingly injured. Another woman jumped out and escaped with much slighter injuries. When the fire brigade arrived the flames were burning furiously in the three floors, and they were not subdued till the premises were destroyed.

A REMARKABLE WHIRLWIND.

The village of Ronaford St. Ervan, about four miles to the south-west of Padstow, on the north coast of Cornwall, was lately the scene of a remarkable phenomenon, which caused considerable alarm to most of the villagers. The weather up to 2 o'clock in the afternoon was calm, with a little rain; but about that time three rows of corn standing in an adjacent field were suddenly carried into the air to a considerable height, and the sheaves fell in showers at distances varying from 50 to 100 yards from their original position. Immediately after the roof of a cattle shed was wrenched off with great force, and an apple tree, with roots of about 15 inches in circumference, was uprooted with much violence, and its leaves, with those of the surrounding trees, were whirled upwards in a cloud to such a height that they were entirely lost to view by those who witnessed the strange occurrence. A boy walking along was lifted up by the wind and turned over but was uninjured. The whirlwind lasted only about two minutes and covered a very limited area. It travelled in a north-easterly direction.

AN EVENTFUL VOYAGE.

The New Zealand Shipping Company's Royal Mail steamship Rimutaka, Captain E. O. Hallett, R.N. Reserve, which arrived at Plymouth on Saturday, September 12, from New Zealand, had a somewhat extraordinary voyage. According to the statement of the passengers who landed at Plymouth, the Rimutaka left Wellington in the teeth of a stiff gale blowing from the south. The seas were running very high, and frequently made clean breaches over the ship. Two large boats were swept out of their chocks and somewhat severely damaged. The gale raged in all its fury for about two days, and after it had abated the ship began to get among ice and snow. The weather was bitterly cold and intensely felt by all those on board, especially the second-class passengers. The ship eventually became literally covered with icicles, and presented the appearance of a vessel in the Arctic regions. The ropes became one mass of ice and snow, even the signal halyards being six times their ordinary size. On the hurricane deck there were six inches of ice, and under the fore hatch 12 inches. It was not until the ship reached as far south as 55.31 latitude that the captain, according to the statements made, changed his course, and soon the ice was left behind. The ship was among the ice for five days, and the thermometer registered 15° below zero. Eight of the crew, including the boatswain, were frostbitten in their hands, and it was alleged that they had not altogether recovered up to the time the ship reached Plymouth. At any rate the boatswain wore gloves up to within a few days of the ship's arrival, and then his hands peeled as if they had been severely scalded. After leaving the ice the Rimutaka met with bad weather and strong head winds to within three days of Cape Horn. The Horn was rounded on the 19th in beautiful weather.

SALVATIONISTS MOBBED.

Shortly before 11 o'clock on the night of June 16 a disturbance occurred at the Broad-street Railway Station. A body of Salvationists, numbering about 150, of whom about one-third were women, arrived at the station at about 20 minutes to 11 by train from Hackney. They were all in uniform, and were accompanied by a band. No sooner had they assembled upon the open space in front of the platforms than they were surrounded by persons of both sexes, and in a few moments some very rough hustling commenced. A cry of "Armstrong" was raised, and from that moment until the arrival of a body of railway servants and police about 10 minutes later the Salvationists had a very rough time of it. At a quarter to 11 the crowd must have numbered from 5000 to 6000. Several of the Salvationists had their hats pulled off and trampled on. An attempt was made to obtain possession of the big drum, but the Salvationists formed a ring round it and defended it. By this time they were thrown against the refreshment department, and so great was the crush that but for the arrival of the police some of them must have been driven through the glass doors.

EXTRAORDINARY HOAX IN DUBLIN.

The following advertisement appeared in a Dublin paper on September 14:—"Cats. Immediate. A gentleman returning to Auckland, commissioned to import a number of cats, offers 2s. for grown cats and 1s. for kittens, to be brought in small baskets, which will be allowed for, to booking-office, Carlisle Pier, between 6.30 and 7 o'clock p.m. this day. Inquire for Mr. Watson, between 5 and 6 o'clock." About 150 people assembled on the Carlisle Pier, Kingstown. There were women and girls and boys with hampers and creels and hat-boxes, in each of which there was a cat, or a brace of cats, or a whole litter of kittens. A long wait followed, and then inquiries were made, but to the dismay of the owners of the cats no tidings were to be had of the advertiser; and at the ticket-office, on board the mail steamer, they were informed that no such person had been booked. A large number of people, attracted to the pier by the unusual scene, indulged in jokes at the expense of the owners of the cats, and a number of police took up positions to keep the crowd in order. Eventually the cats were taken home by their owners. A number of boys, on hearing of the advertisement, commenced at an early hour to steal cats, and made their appearance to effect a sale with the advertiser.

DARING CAPTURE OF A SLAVER.

A correspondent, writing from Zanzibar on August 25, says the slave-trade is very brisk just now. Both her Majesty's ships Kingfisher and Dragon have made captures recently. The Kingfisher's capture was very cleverly and courageously effected:—The steam-cutter, being short of coal, left one man and an interpreter on the look-out (with orders to mark down any dhows arriving, but not to get into danger) while she ran down to the depot island to fill up with coals. Scarcely had she got out of sight when in came a dhow. The captain and crew eagerly scanned the surrounding bays and islands for men-of-war boats, and, finding none, dropped their anchor. Perceiving that she was a doubtful and suspicious vessel, the interpreter obtained an old canoe, placed the blue jacket in the bottom of it with strict injunctions not to show himself, and proceeded to pull off to the stranger. Arriving within a few hundred yards of the dhow, the captain espied the blue-jacket in the bottom of the canoe, and, together with his crew of Arabs (five in number), proceeded to load their guns and flourish their swords. At this crisis the blue-jacket, sailor-like, wanted to make a dash for the dhow; but the interpreter, with poor Captain Brownrigg's fate fresh in his memory, was more wary. "Wait a bit, Jack," said he, "we'll get them all right;" and poling the canoe on the shore, he ran along the beach a little way to a small bay where the boats lie generally hid, and began to shout and shriek to two imaginary boats, telling them to be quick. "Come on, come on," he shouted; "they are going to jump overboard and swim on shore;" and sure enough those five Arabs sprang overboard, and swimming to the shore, four of them bolted into the bush, and were not seen again. One of them, however, the captain of the dhow, finding that the boats did not turn up, made towards the blue-jacket with his gun; but Jack was quite equal to the occasion. Every time the Arab attempted to take him Jack flung himself down in the sand; and on the other side, the Arab, who was up to his waist in the water, ducked underneath whenever the sailor covered him with his rifle. Jack did not seem to realise the danger of getting within range of the Arab's gun until the interpreter had repeatedly told him that if he did not "pink" the Arab the Arab would "pink" him. So the next chance he got he fired, and must have struck the Arab somewhere in the chest, for he just shrieked "Allah!" threw up his arms, and sank beneath the water. When the officer returned he found his man and the interpreter in quiet possession of a 57-ton dhow with 35 slaves in her. The dhow has been condemned, the slaves liberated, and the court expressed an opinion that the Arab's death was perfectly justifiable.

THE DEATH OF JUMBO.

Jumbo, after the accident which caused his death, lived three minutes according to one account; but another states that he died within half an hour. Tom Thumb's injuries were such as to necessitate his being shot. Mr. Barnum has determined that Jumbo shall be stuffed for exhibition. The temper of Jumbo, which was the cause of his sale to Mr. Barnum, had of late it is stated very much improved.

Medical, Chemicals, &c.

ABRAHAM'S PILLS.
Prepared from Dandelion, are unequalled as a general family Medicine, to be taken at any time and in all conditions, to remove any obstruction to good health, to be used in all cases where action in the liver, bowels, or stomach would prove beneficial. They leave no injurious deposits in the blood. Sold everywhere. Prepared at the Laboratory, 434, George-street, Sydney. 1s, 2s, and 3s.

INVALID VISITORS to Sydney.—SENIOR'S Pharmacy, 246, George-street, near Bridge-street (only), the oldest and largest in Australia, is replete with the medicines of the Pharmacopœia, the new preparations not included in it, and all the modern appliances for dispensing. On account of the difficulty in getting careful assistants, the proprietor and his sons are always engaged in the work of manipulation, and have established a peculiar system of dispensing, if anything, superior to what is found in the old country, and which makes a mistake almost impossible. No apprentices kept.

MESSRS. J. K. BLOOD and CO., Limited, Melbourne.
Gentlemen,—A few days ago I had a sudden attack of illness, which, at the time, I supposed was caused by drinking Utica Hop Bitters, and by some means a report got abroad that the Bitters was the cause. I now desire to state that such report was wholly without foundation, and I regret very much that it was circulated. I have since had the Utica Hop Bitters analysed, and the analysis discloses no deleterious matter; but, on the contrary, such ingredients as tend to constitute a healthy and invigorating appetiser.
Yours truly,
Regent-street, Sydney, October 27, 1885. WM. PEGRUM.

GRANVILLE TOWNSHIP, fronts main streets, and surrounded by the principal buildings.—Auction Sale, next Saturday, at 3.45. W. A. Brodie, auctioneer, Parramatta.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE.
BEECHAM'S PILLS
Are admitted by thousands to be worth a GUINEA A BOX for Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as wind and pain in the stomach, sick headache, giddiness, fulness and swelling after meals, dizziness and drowsiness, cold chills, flushings of heat, loss of appetite, shortness of breath, costiveness, scurvy, blotches on the skin, disturbed sleep, frightful dreams, and all nervous and trembling sensations, &c. The first dose will give relief in 20 minutes. This is no fiction, for they have done it in thousands of cases. Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these Pills, and they will be acknowledged to be WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.
For females of all ages these pills are invaluable, as a few doses of them carry off all gross humours, open all obstructions, and bring about all that is required. No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found to equal BEECHAM'S PILLS for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust health.
For a weak stomach, impaired digestion, and all disorders of the liver, they act like "MAGIC," and a few doses will be found to work wonders upon the most important organs in the human machine. They strengthen the whole muscular system, restore the long-lost complexion, bring back the keen edge of appetite, and arouse into action with the ROSEBUD of health the whole physical energy of the human frame. These are FACTS admitted by thousands, embracing all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the nervous and debilitated is BEECHAM'S PILLS have the largest sale of any patent medicine in the world.
BEECHAM'S MAGIC COUGH PILLS.
As a remedy for Coughs in general, asthma, difficulty of breathing, shortness of breath, tightness and oppression of the chest, wheezing, &c., these Pills stand unrivalled. They speedily remove that sense of oppression and difficulty of breathing which nightly deprive the patient of rest. Let any person give Beecham's Cough Pills a trial, and the most violent cough will in a short time be removed.
CAUTION.—The public are requested to notice that the words "Beecham's Pills, St. Helens," are on the Government Stamp affixed to each box of the Pills. If not on, they are a forgery.
Prepared only and sold wholesale and retail by the proprietor T. Beecham, chemist, St. Helens, Lancashire, England, in boxes at 1s 1½d and 2s 9d each. Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers throughout the Colonies.
N.B.—Full directions are given with each box.

PRELIMINARY ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE RANGERS, MOSSMAN'S BAY.

Comprising A COMMODIOUS FAMILY MANSION, and 40 ACRES of MAGNIFICENTLY TIMBERED LANDS.

The beautiful and renowned Freehold Residential Estate of Oswald Bloxsome, Esq., which for its perfect taste, harmony of style, grand, yet charming and attractive, situation, and general completeness, may be said to be unequalled.

HARDIE and GORMAN are favoured with instructions from the owner, OSWALD BLOXSOME, Esq. (owing to his projected departure for Europe), to sell by public auction, at their Rooms, 133, Pitt-street, ON AN EARLY DATE (IN ONE LOT), THE SINGULARLY CHOICE and EXCEPTIONALLY BEAUTIFUL FREEHOLD ESTATE, distinguished as THE RANGERS, MOSSMAN'S BAY, occupying a position which for accessibility from town, and for the loveliness of its rural surroundings, cannot be surpassed.

THE MANSION, a stately pile, in the Elizabethan style, of stone, is remarkable as displaying in its erection, and every detail, a refined taste and sound judgment, which, with ample wealth and matured experience, have combined in placing upon a spot whereon nature has lavished charms of picturesque beauty A SPLENDID HOME, replete with all that art and science can devise. It is seated on a high plateau, COMMANDING VIEWS EXTENDING IN ALL DIRECTIONS as far as the eye can reach. But perhaps the choicest feature of the Estate is the surpassingly beautiful grounds. They are large and varied, possessing the charm of an indefinite extent, while stately trees, splendid shrubs, rich and varied flower beds, sloping and levelled lawns, terraces, winding paths, and plantations of luxuriant evergreens, form a singular combination of attractions, and render the residence delightful in every season.

It is impossible that a property of such a remarkable character and having so many features commanding special admiration can be appreciated without personal inspection, but it may be safely asserted that this estate stands alone and unrivalled within a like distance of Sydney.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is directed to GENTLEMEN of MEANS, WEALTHY CAPITALISTS, BUILDING COMPANIES, and others.

Full detailed particulars will appear in a future advertisement.

LOT 2.—INTEREST in LEASE or ground rent of Block of Land (upon which the above houses and numerous other dwellings are erected, having about 89 years to run), at a ground rent of £48 5s per annum, and from which sub-leases return £76 15s per annum.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from the Trustees to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 30th October, at 11 o'clock,
The above, which will be a good investment.

OVERTON PARK, FAIRFIELD.

A superior and profitable Orchard, Orangery and Vineyard, long and successfully worked by Mr. BELLINGER, who retires with a competency. The total area of land is 40½ acres, having large frontage to main Smithfield-road, and extending to Prospect Creek, of never-failing good water. There are about 30 acres under cultivation as above, comprising the choicest kinds of oranges, apples, and stone fruits; all healthy, vigorous, and bearing. The vineyard, too, is full of promise of a large yield. The soil is exceptionally rich and most easily worked, all the labour is now performed, and the buyer will have only a few months to wait to reap a valuable crop all round. A splendid mine of rich soil is on the estate, which admirably serves in part as manure for the trees, thus offering a great saving.

The total revenue has reached £1100 per annum, and as new ground is planted the probability of a larger income may be expected. There are two comfortable Cottages. The homestead, one containing 6 apartments, kitchen, scullery, bedroom, dairy, &c., besides all necessary outbuildings. The other is new, of 4 rooms.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH, instructed by Mr. Bellinger, will sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 30th October, at 11 o'clock,
The above. Highly recommended for inspection, to city gentlemen, fruiterers, speculators, and others as a highly productive property, the front portion of which, about 10 acres unimproved on main road, could be cut off and subdivided for sale.
Plan on view. Terms liberal.

CHURCH-STREET, NEWTOWN.

ALMA HOUSE, No. 57, and adjoining 34 feet vacant land, extending 88 feet back to a lane. The house is well built of brick on stone, has verandah, balcony, hall, 6 rooms, and other conveniences. In yard are wooden stabling premises.
A few pounds to brighten up the house would make it a very desirable home, in a handy position, commanding wide views for miles.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH will sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 30th October, at 11 o'clock,
The above house and vacant land.
Recommended for inspection.

BOURKE-STREET, REDFERN.

SUPERIOR Dwelling House, No. 97, of THURLOW-TERRACE, a little south of Cleveland-street, and handy to Moore Park and the Surry Hills tram. It is faithfully built of brick on stone, with slate roof, and has verandah, hall, 6 rooms, bathroom, kitchen, and washhouse, gas and city water.
Land is 17½ feet to BOURKE-STREET, x 125 feet in depth, extending to a lane.
FREEHOLD; rental, £65 per annum.
This is a capital Dwelling-house, in a pleasant and convenient position. Inspection invited. Terms at sale.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH will sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 30th October, at 11 o'clock,
The above well-known house, Thurlow-terrace. Freehold.

ELEVATED SITE, ST. LEONARDS.

70 FEET FRONTAGE to MERLIN-STREET, on the high ridge, close to the LARGE RESERVE and MILITARY-ROAD, along which the tramway is expected soon to pass. The depth is very considerable, viz., 264 feet, and having a lane on the whole of the northern boundary line.
The position is very good, and commands wide and charming views, adjoining Mr. Gibson's large cottage and grounds.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on 30th OCTOBER, at 11 o'clock,
The above capital site at St. Leonards, only 5 minutes from tram, now in construction.

This beautifully-situated suburb is attracting a large number of residents to it, and many have paid big values for sites. This block is worth the attention of those desiring a really eligible block, in what is a convenient part now, and will be the more easily reached when the tram is running.
Terms at sale.

BY ORDER OF TRUSTEES.

STERLING INVESTMENT.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 30th October, at 11 o'clock,
Block of land having frontages to Stewart-street, Gordon-street, and a lane. On it is CLARENDON-TERRACE, Nos. 112, 114, 116, and 118, Stewart-street, built of brick (cemented and painted), on stone foundation, slate roofs, with verandahs and balconies in front, also balconies at rear, and containing each hall, 5 rooms, attic room, kitchen, bathroom and washhouse; city water.

 These houses are faithfully built and well finished; portions of the internal fittings are of cedar, two rooms having folding doors, and gas is laid on.
The attention of trustees, guardians, and capitalists is particularly directed to the sale of this well-situated and very desirable terrace.
Messrs. ELLIS and MAKINSON, Elizabeth-street, are Solicitors of the Trustees.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE of the SALE
THE ONLY
WATERSIDE FRONTAGE LOTS to be obtained on the well-known
McLEAY ESTATE,
ELIZABETH BAY.

THIS LARGE BLOCK OF LAND, containing about
ONE ACRE, extends from
BILLYARD AVENUE
to the
WATERS OF ELIZABETH BAY, on which side it is protected by a massive sea-wall, of solid masonry, with two well-built BOAT DOCKS,
or arrangements for sea-water baths, or both, as the purchaser may determine.

On this property—including the reclamation filled up and levelled—a very large sum of money has been expended, from which the purchaser will derive great benefit by finding the land ready for the hand of the builder, and for the formation of pleasure grounds.

The Frontages of the land are as follows, viz.:—
140 FEET to BILLYARD-AVENUE,
and
80 FEET 6 INCHES to the WATERS OF THE BAY,
the side lines measuring about 310 FEET.

It will be sold in one or two lots.

As a Block it cannot be surpassed for a site for a first-class
MARINE RESIDENCE; or divided into TWO LOTS,
as a position for
Smaller or two SEMI-DETACHED VILLAS.

The aspect of the land is North of East, and every inch of it commands the most extensive, varied, and lovely views to be found within the limits of the noble Harbour of Port Jackson.

The surroundings of this choice block of waterside Land are eminently of a high character, including the elegant properties, Tintern, Cardigan, Purfleet, Rockmore, and the residence of Mr. H. Prince.

The land is leasehold, held under the McLeay estate. Title, having 96 years to run, at a ground rent of £140 per annum, which amount, in the event of the land being sold in two lots, would be apportioned between them.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Room, Pitt-street,

FRIDAY, the 30th OCTOBER,
at 11 o'clock,
the above valuable, important, and the only waterside block of land to be obtained in the popular and fashionable portion of Sydney, where it enjoys all the delights of a distant marine suburb, with the convenience of a short and easy access to the heart of the city; within a few minutes' ride.
Further particulars will be published in a few days, when plan may be inspected at the Rooms.
Terms, at sale.

BY ORDER of the TRUSTEES of the LATE
SIR J. B. DARVALL, to close
EXECUTORSHIP ACCOUNTS.
BOTANY.
VALUABLE SUBDIVISION BLOCK OF LAND,
in area
ELEVEN ACRES ONE ROOD, having extensive frontages to BAY-STREET,
and a side road
only a few yards off the main
BOTANY-ROAD.

THIS LARGE BLOCK OF FREEHOLD LAND is traversed by a running stream of water, which at a very small expense might be directed through the property so as not to interfere with its subdivision into building and market garden areas, the land on the upper side, nearest the BOTANY-ROAD and TRAMWAY, being admirably adapted for the erection of residences, while the lower portion is formed of that rich black soil so much sought after by gardeners for the cultivation of vegetables—towards which profitable industry the value of the water supply running through the land is of immense importance.

As a large block—over 11 acres in extent—for subdivision, this property can be well recommended to speculators and others as offering a safe investment for a large future profit.

THE BOTANY TRAMWAY runs within a few yards of the property.

THE TITLE is under REAL PROPERTY ACT, TORRENS'.

A PLAN of the PROPERTY may be inspected at the ROOMS.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by public auction to the HIGHEST BIDDER, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 30th OCTOBER,
at 11 o'clock.
The above VALUABLE PROPERTY, formerly known as the BOTANY TANNERY.

One-third cash, and balance may remain on mortgage for 3 years at 6 per cent. per annum.

MACLEAY ESTATE, ELIZABETH BAY.

SPLENDID BLOCK OF LAND, having frontages of
62 FEET 9 INCHES to ONSLOW-AVENUE
80 FEET to BILLYARD-AVENUE, with the great depth of 355 feet on one side and 343 feet on the other.

To Merchants, Capitalists, and others, this Sale affords a good chance of acquiring a first-class Building Site in one of the most conservative and select portions of the city; and, though within the boundary thereof, the situation enjoys all the charm of suburban position.
It is between the residences of Messrs. H. S. S. Bond and B. B. Nicoll, and commands harbour views.

Title, leasehold—95½ years to run.
FREEHOLDS cannot be purchased in this locality.

TITLE, UNQUESTIONABLE.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from the proprietor, Mr. James M'Govan to sell by public auction, on the Ground, SATURDAY, the 7th November next, at 2 o'clock,

The above choice Block of Land, which, under the able superintendence of Messrs. Atchison and Schleicher, the well-known surveyors, has been laid out into VILLA and
OTHER BUILDING SITES, varying in size from ¼ Acre upwards.

The ESTATE commences at the well-known Bridge over the Mittagong Rivulet, making a continuation of Merrigang-street, leading from and extending the TOWNSHIP of BOWRAL. The frontage to this street has been subdivided into Lots of 50 feet each, by depths ranging from 232 to 276 feet.
Intersecting the property are
FRANKLIN-STREET, STANLEY-STREET,
and
JAMIESON-STREET,
the frontages to which have been apportioned out in similar allotments to the above, while the rest of the property has been set out in various sized areas, extending to over an acre, and so arranged that several must be acquired by the same purchaser without intersecting roads.

A sale plan is now on view, and copies in lithograph may be obtained on application at the Rooms, or at Mr. M'Govan's, Bowral.

A Special Train will convey intending purchasers to Bowral on day of sale, for which tickets for return journey may be obtained at the Rooms in a few days.

STANMORE.

To Merchants, Professional Gentlemen, and others.

That magnificent
RESIDENCE and LARGE GROUNDS, known as ELMSIDE,
The property of JOHN HINCHCLIFFE, Esq., and only being parted with as his family are leaving for the country.
It occupies one of the most charming sites in this select and fashionable Railway Suburb, so easily reached from Stanmore and Newtown by TRAIN OR BY TRAM.

It adjoins CLUNES, the mansion of Hon. JOHN CAMPBELL, M.L.C., and the residences of Messrs. F. L. Barker and John Gardiner, Esqs., and is opposite the grounds of Woodside, the seat of S. A. STEPHEN, Esq., M.L.A.

The grounds are ample, embracing an area of OVER ONE ACRE, having
198 FEET TO HARROW-ROAD,
198 FEET TO CAMBRIDGE-STREET,
and a through depth of 264 feet.
They are highly improved, having imposing and handsome iron entrance gates, with massive freestone pillars. A carriage drive leads up to the mansion, and on both sides of it are pretty lawns and artistically laid out garden plots, stocked with the choicest plants, while the borders have well-grown ornamental tree of varied hues.
There are Fernery, Summerhouse, and Flagstaff.

 The entrance is on HARROW-ROAD.

ELMSIDE is a comfortable house, faithfully built of brick on stone foundations, slate roof, having verandahs and balconies all round, and containing wide hall, and the following large accommodation, viz.:—
ON THE GROUND FLOOR—Drawing-room, Dining-room, Breakfast-room, Sitting-room, Wine-room, 2 Conservatories, Pantry, and Lavatory.
A LOFTY and large BILLIARD-ROOM, fitted with gas stove and gas, lavatory, and speaking tubes.
ON THE FIRST FLOOR—Four good Bedrooms, Dressing-room, Bathroom, Linen Closet, Patent W. C.
There are large Kitchen, Scullery and Laundry, Dairy, Store-room, with four Bedrooms, Bathroom, and Patent W.Cs. over.
A MAN'S COTTAGE, of 4 rooms and Kitchen; EXTENSIVE Brick STABLING, comprising 3 loose Boxes, Harness-room, Carriage-house, and large Loft over; detached are rooms for 3 Vehicles, Toolhouses, and Fuelsheds.
Fowlhouses, &c.; also Kitchen Garden.

The Auctioneers would point out that it is seldom so attractive and superior a Residence, with such complete appointments, is submitted to public competition, and the Vendor has had a just pride in bringing the property to its present state of perfection for the comfort of his family. He parts with it solely on account of removal to the country.
The internal Fittings of the house are of Cedar, Marble Mantelpieces, and Tiled Hearths; some windows in principal rooms are of mediæval glass; and altogether the whole property is in the very best of order, and will require no outlay for years yet to come.
The surroundings are all of a high class, and from ELMSIDE are commanded charming views for miles.

AN INSPECTION alone will convey to intending buyers a full idea of the House and Grounds.
CARDS TO VIEW on application to the Auctioneers.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from JOHN HINCHCLIFFE, Esq. (for the sole reason above stated), to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on FRIDAY, 13th November, at 11 o'clock,
"ELMSIDE"—The above choice residence and pretty grounds on the hill at Stanmore.
